GANG RECORDS SEIZED IN CHICAGO IMPLICATE MEN HIGH IN POLITICS

Names "We Do Not Dare to Talk Of" Found in Capone Safes.

UNDERWORLD CLOSES ITS RESORTS IN PANIC

Rex Hotel Yields Papers Said to Reach Even to Congress.

Chicago, Jan. 18 (A.P.).—Shock troops of the law tore the lid off a veritable Pandora's box of crime secrets today and sent new shudders quivering through the underworld and its purported public allies.

Squads of tried and trusted detective aces swooped down onto the Rex Hotel, whence the gang of Al Capone has for years sent its henchmen to deal in liquor, gambling and vice, and emerged with two safes, full of records which authorities describe as "astounding."

These records, according to Assistant State's Attorney Charles J. Mueller and Charles E. Lounsbury, cast the shadow of suspicion into every branch of government in Cook County and even into the halls of Congress. They show, these prosecutors declared, illicit dealings between Capone gangsters and policemen, politicians and public officials, including what they described as "names we don't even dare talk about."

Jury to Get Records.

Tonight, Messrs. Mueller and Lounsbury had the records in an unrevealed place, where they were poring over cancelled checks, purported "pay off" lists, ledgers and other documents which the gang found necessary to keep in detail as it emerged into the class of "big business." Tomorrow they are to take the evidence before the special grand jury, summoned on order of Chief Justice John P. McGoorty to investigate the ugly rumors which have long attached to the police department.

Already the spectacular attack of the law has had its repercussions. Reporters assigned to investigate found that almost every speakeasy in the loop had been closed, that gambling places were shut tight, and that hoodlums accustomed to frequent the Rialto had scurried for cover.

Zuta Expose Outdone.

The raiders called their seizures "probably the most important and astonishing in the history of corruption in Chicago." They are more far-reaching, the investigators insisted, than the sensational records of Jack Zuta, which sent public officials scampering to the forefront with explanations.

The Rex Hotel is conducted by Dennis (the duke) Cooney, high in the Capone councils, and has for years been one of the most notorious places in a district long looked upon as synonymous with lawlessness. After the raiders had taken control of the building they kept it under guard for more than four hours, during which time they reported that about 300 men sought admittance.

Two uniformed policemen and two detectives also visited the hotel while the investigators were in charge and Mr. Mueller related, were severely rebuked when they said they were under orders to call there every hour to watch for violations, but never had found any.

"How long have you been blind?" Mr. Mueller is said to have asked them.

Fifteen Men, Six Women, Taken.

Cooney is reported to be in Florida and George (Tubby) Miller was in charge when officers entered. Mr. Mueller said that, though the Rex has been running wide open for years, he did not recall of its ever having been raided before. It was found eqhipped with an elaborate buzzer system to warn of police, and had trick sliding doors and other contrivances to hinder officers. Detectives had the place surrounded, however, and arrested fifteen men and six young women. Miller is among the prisoners.

In addition to revolvers, police night sticks, blackjacks and a shot-

Honor Legion Medal Presented Lindbergh

Historic Flight Recalled as French Envoy Makes Award.

The Legion of Honor of France, with its flaming red ribbon, was added to the collection of medals owned by Col. Charles A. Lindbergh, yesterday afternoon at the French Embassy. In presenting it to him, before a gathering of notable persons, Ambassador Paul Claudel, directed attention to the careful preparation, which had made both his flight and that of Coste and Bellonte successful.

"His visit to France," he said, "was to us a challenge, but it also was a lesson. His success was not the triumph of rashness and of blind daring; it was the well deserved prize of infinite pains. Three years have passed since that wonderful day in May, and in September, 1930, the visit of the Spirit of St. Louis was paid back to America by our two great space conquerors, Coste and Bellonte."

Lindbergh's reply was characteristically brief and low-voiced. "Mr. Ambassador," he answered, "I want to express my very great thanks to you and to the government of France for this great honor."

The ceremony of presentation was also repeated on the floor below. Ambassador Claudel stood for some time in the glare of the powerful lights, which moving picture men had set up, blinking and shading his eyes, before the famous flier appeared. The medal, which had so recently been presented to him, was hanging from Lindbergh's pocket, when the ambassador asked for it to again make the presentation.

The guest list included:

Col. and Mrs. Charles Lindbergh, Senator and Mrs. Dwight Morrow, Secretary of State and Mrs. Stimson, Secretary of War and Mrs. Hurley, Secretary of the Navy and Mrs. Adams, Secretary of Commerce and

HOSPITAL IS INVADED AS MOB SEEKS MAN

1,500 Storm Building Where Suspected Slayer of Two Lies.

THRONG IN CORRIDORS

Shreveport, La., Jan. 18 (A.P.).—A crowd estimated at more than 1,500 persons milled about Charity Hospital tonight, as police guarded Lemon McDaniel, Negro, critically wounded last night in a police raid in which two policemen were fatally shot. Several hundred persons crowded the corridors of the hospital.

Police reserves were dispatched to the hospital tonight as a crowd gathered. They formed a guard about the room and corridor leading to where the Negro is confined, as the crowd increased and part of it swarmed into the hospital.

Policemen Lee Allen Williams and Teddy Williams were killed last night in leading a squad of officers while raiding a reputed gambling house.

The two men, who were not related, approached the house with S. A. Jones, another officer, with their faces blackened and wearing old clothes. Members of the trailing squad said McDaniel, acting as a lookout, opened fire, killing the officers. The Negro was wounded in the gun battle.

Relapse Is Suffered By Maj. Gen. Edwards

Boston, Jan. 18 (A.P.).—Maj. Gen. Clarence R. Edwards, war-time commander of the Twenty-sixth (Yankee) Division, who underwent an emergency operation at the Phillips House on Thursday, suffered a relapse tonight.

His physicians announced that "the outlook is not favorable."

SUSPECT LIBERATED IN LIMERICK MURDER

UNABLE TO AID INQUIRY

Edgar Little MacIntyre, who Saturday came to police headquarters volunteering information regarding the Limerick murder, was released yesterday from the Twelfth Precinct Police Station after being questioned for five hours by Detective Sergt. John Flaherty, of the homicide squad, who said MacIntyre was unable to furnish them with any leads which might show the way toward solution of the crime.

Police said they believe MacIntyre has no connection with the slaying. MacIntyre now lives in Cardiff, Md. He formerly resided at 3525 Eastern avenue, with a married sister, Mrs. Earl Jenkins. He is a sheet metal worker.

Police obtained a signed statement concerning the facts of his acquaintance with Beulah Limerick. He said that he had known her since last September and admitted being a member of the "Sky High Whoopee Club." On many occasions he had been a visitor to the house on Nineteenth street, he said, but he had always been accompanied by two friends, Roy Tobin and Leonard Davis. This statement was checked by police and verified.

The last time he visited the house in which the murder was committed was December 4. There was a party that night, a crowd was present, and there was drinking and dancing until midnight, he said. Beulah left the party with persons unknown to him, and soon after his friends, To-

Daisy De Boe Plans Exposes Too Fast for Clara to Deny

Film Star's Former Secretary Spends Day Piling Up Verbal Ammunition for Resumption of Witness Stand Today; "It" Girl Loses Faith.

Los Angeles, Jan. 18 (A.P.).—Daisy DeBoe, "tell-all" secretary to Clara Bow, spending Sunday bent intently over court transcripts, today piled up ammunition for fresh volleys on the witness stand tomorrow morning in her trial for grand theft of $15,300 from the film "it" girl.

"There's going to be a lot more inside Hollywood stuff," she promised, her eyes blazing over the henna-haired actress' latest denials and counter-threats. Daisy curled her lips over Clara's threats to "ruin her" in her next turn on the stand, intimating she was ready "to kick the lid off" secrets faster than Clara could refute them.

While Daisy prepared more comments about Clara's affairs, the "it" girl ruminated fiercely over Daisy's out of school tales.

The film flapper, confined to her room by a severe cold and case of nerves, was steaming up for an emotional burst of denials and counter-attacks in the courtroom.

"To think of her telling that stuff about my drinking and gambling," the actress exclaimed, her eyes flashing indignation. "I don't say I never took a drink. Who doesn't?

"Gambling—we only play a 15-cent limit. You can't lose much that way, besides, I usualy won."

The actress intimated she was ready to "kiss good-by" to the forty-odd thousand dollars she believes Daisy took, and that she was ready to forget the jewelry, furs and clothes she

CAR ACCIDENTS END LIVES OF 2 CITY RESIDENTS

Prof. Allen Johnson, 61, and Mrs. Ruby Gaw Are Victims.

AUTHOR - EDUCATOR IS HIT AT STREET CORNER

Frederick, Md., Shoemaker Killed by Auto on Road Near Capital.

Three persons, two of them Washington residents, were killed in automobile accidents in and near Washington over the week-end.

Prof. Allen Johnson, 61 years old, author and editor, of 2310 Connecticut avenue northwest, died last night within an hour after being struck down by an automobile as he was crossing Connecticut avenue at Rhode Island avenue northwest.

Mrs. Ruby Gaw, 23 years old, of 1374 Harvard street northwest, died yesterday morning at the University Hospital at Charlottesville, Va., from injuries received Saturday night when the roadster in which she was riding with her husband, Russell Gaw, ran over an embankment near Gordonsville, Va.

Morris R. Baker, 54 years old, a shoemaker of Frederick, Md., was instantly killed last night when struck by an automobile on the Georgetown pike near Frederick, Md. Edward C. Sherman, of Newark street near Twenty-third street northwest, was reported to be the driver of the car.

Driver Is Being Held.

Samuel Cherkosky, of 407 Rhode Island avenue northeast, driver of the car that struck Prof. Johnson, according to Policeman H. H. Prince, of the Third Precinct, who investigated the accident, was being held at the Third Precinct last night, in lieu of bond, pending a coroner's inquest.

Coroner J. Ramsay Nevitt announced that an inquest will be held at 11 o'clock tomorrow morning.

Prof. Johnson was crossing the street against the red light, and Cherkosky had the right of way, according to Policeman Prince's report, based on information given by witnesses and corroborated by Samuel Manchester, of 1107 Seventh street northwest, who was a passenger in Cherkosky's car.

Cherkosky was driving on the east side of Connecticut avenue and was preparing to turn into Rhode Island avenue when Prof. Johnson was struck down, according to the police Death Caused by Shock.

Prof. Johnson received a fracture of the left arm and left leg and lacerations of the head. His death was caused by shock, according to Emergency Hospital physicians. The accident occurred at 8:20 o'clock and Prof. Johnson died at 9:50 o'clock. He was taken to the hospital by Cherkosky.

Prof. Johnson was the author of numerous books on historical subjects, including The Dictionary of American Biography, which he published under the auspices of the American Council of Learned Societies. He lived alone at the St. Albans Apartments, 2310 Connecticut avenue northwest. He had lived in Washington since 1926. Up to that time he had been professor of American history at Yale University. He was born at Lowell, Mass., January 29, 1870.

Failure of the steering gear to operate caused the accident in which Mrs. Gaw lost her life, according to a brother, Bruce Gaw, also of Washington, who, with his wife was in another car a short distance behind. Examination of the car after the accident revealed that a bolt on

THOUSANDS SEE FIRE THREATEN OLD LANDMARK

Five-Alarm Blaze Quelled in Structure Where Lafayette Lived.

ORIGIN IS SUSPICIOUS IN OPINION OF CHIEF

Building Served as College for Girls and Carmelite Retreat House.

One of Washington's best known landmarks was badly damaged by a fire, last night, which brought five alarms, dozens of fire trucks and thousands of spectators—but comparatively little loss to the owner.

The huge 66-room house, with its 16 bathrooms, at 200 Todd street northeast, attacked by flames which firemen describe as of "very suspicious" origin, has figured in Washington's history from colonial times.

The fire apparently started on the stairs at the rear of the west wing of the building, and worked its way up the staircase to the third floor, where it spread its way toward the front of the house. Firemen confined the blaze to this wing.

Suspicion Aroused.

The suspicions of the firemen were aroused when they discovered where the blaze originated. This they coupled with the mysterious disappearance of the watchman, Frank Cook, 65, colored, who lived on the premises. He has not been seen since early yesterday.

After the fire was well under control, every room in the structure was searched for Cook, but no trace of him was found.

"The fact that the fire started on the stairs on the first floor—and on top of them, not under them—leads us to be suspicious as to its origin," Fire Chief George S. Watson said.

"I would not say that the fire was of incendiary origin, as it may have been started quite accidentally, but we have asked police to search for the watchman and question him."

Five Alarms Sounded.

The blaze was well under way when the first alarm came in at 7:35. The second alarm was sounded at 7:40, followed by a third at 7:46, a fourth at 7:50 and the fifth at 8 o'clock.

Apparatus from over the city was sent scurrying to the blaze and soon the wooded hillside surrounding the ancient structure was crowded by spectators, drawn by the noise of the fire engines and the glare of the flames.

Police had some difficulty in forming fire lines to hold the throngs of curiosity seekers in check, but they were soon herded back and the firemen attacked the flames with a deluge from their hose.

Soon they had the flames checked, and as the glare died down the spectators straggled away, clearing the streets in the neighborhood, which a short time before had given police an acute traffic problem.

Acting Fire Marshal C. G. Achstetter estimated the damage to the building at $15,000.

The building was empty save for the watchman's cot, his few cooking utensils and personal effects.

Lafayette Lived There.

J. Leo Kolb, insurance agent, with offices at 923 New York avenue northwest, whose firm handled insurance on the building, said that a $75,000 policy was carried on it. He said that the structure was owned by Harry Groom, New York financier, and that he understood it had been

Calvin Coolidge Says:

The third week of January has been designated as a time for considering the advantages of thrift, perhaps in part because it follows the birthday of Benjamin Franklin.

Thrift does not mean parsimony. It is not to be in any way identified with the miser. The thrifty person is one who does the best that is possible to provide for suitable discharge of the future duties of life. In its essence it is self-control. Industry and judgment are required to achieve it. Contentment and economic freedom are its fruits.

Most frequently we identify the thought of thrift with various institutions that have been provided to make it effective. We associate savings banks and insurance companies prominently among its agencies. But the main principle is saving today something that will be useful tomorrow. The whole theory of conservation is included. Money is only an incident.

Just at present we need to apply the principle to saving and increasing the strength of our governmental and social structure as well as our economic fabric. We must not squander these precious possessions. And above all a wise thrift now calls for the expenditure of money to save people.

HOOVER NAMES SMITH, COOLIDGE TO BOLSTER RED CROSS FUND DRIVE

Text of Letter Asking Service on Aid Group

(Associated Press.)

President Hoover's letter asking citizens to serve on the Nation-wide committe to assist the Red Cross relief drive, follows:

"I am appointing a Nation-wide committee to sponsor the American Red Cross effort to raise $10,000,000 for the relief of the sufferers in the drought-stricken areas. Mr. Coolidge has consented to act as honorary chairman. Knowing your public spirit I am most desirous that you should be a member of this committee.

"We are faced with a national emergency. Those in need in our larger cities are being and will be provided for through the generosity and self-reliance of the citizens of those communities. The people, however, in the drought-stricken areas in 21 States are not in a position adequately to help themselves and must look to their fellow citizens for temporary assistance.

"The American way of meeting such a relief problem has been through voluntary effort, and for many years this effort has been centered in the American Red Cross, created by the people themselves to act in just such emergencies. It has met its responsibilities magnificently in time of war and of peace.

"It is essential that we should maintain the sound American tradition and spirit of voluntary aid in such emergency, and should not undermine that spirit which has made our Red Cross the outstanding guardian of our people in time of disaster."

"Essential" to Maintain Spirit of Voluntary Aid, Says Executive.

JOHN W. DAVIS LISTED, AS IS GEN. PERSHING

Reed to Ask Postponement on $25,000,000 Item; Borah Defines Stand.

(Associated Press)

President Hoover yesterday moved to bolster the campaign of the Red Cross for $10,000,000 for drought relief.

He appointed a committee of citizens, headed by Calvin Coolidge and Alfred E. Smith.

His announcement came as Congress prepared to go ahead against his advice with the appropriation of $25,000,000 of Federal funds for the Red Cross.

Mr. Hoover made no reference to the move in Congress, which is sponsored by the Democratic leaders, but in his request to the citizens to serve he said:

"We are faced with a national emergency * * * the American way of meeting such a relief problem has been through voluntary effort. * * * It is essential that we should maintain the sound American tradition and spirit of voluntary aid in such emergency and should not undermine that spirit which has made our Red Cross the outstanding guardian of our people in time of disaster."

Reed to Ask Postponement.

Senator Reed (Republican), Pennsylvania, will ask the Senate today to defer consideration of the relief appropriation until February 9, to permit the Red Cross to complete its campaign.

However, it was generally conceded last night that the Federal fund proposal sponsored by Democratic Leader Robinson and Senator Black (Democrat), Alabama, would be approved overwhelmingly by the Senate, and the postponement rejected. Likewise, it was indicated the House leaders believe the proposal or some compromise will go through that branch.

Mr. Hoover confined his statement to an announcement of the personnel of the Nation-wide committee and the text of his invitation to the citizens to serve.

Mr. Coolidge will be the honorary chairman. John Barton Payne, chairman of the Red Cross, will serve as chairman.

Mr. Smith, Democratic opponent of Mr. Hoover in 1928; John W. Davis, Democratic presidential nominee in 1924; Gen. John J. Pershing and Gen. Abel Davis, of Chicago, will be the vice chairmen.

Extra Session Bugaboo.

There was a hint from friends of the President that he will veto the $25,000,000 appropriation, if it is sent to him. Involved, however, in this controversy is the issue of an extra session. To avoid this, administration leaders are prepared to go to considerable length.

House leaders are looking for a compromise. The issue will be before them early in the week.

Without a record vote, the Senate approved the fund yesterday, but, at the request of Mr. Reed, it agreed to reconsider to permit him to offer the postponement resolution.

Mr. Reed himself is one of several Republican regulars who are prepared to support the appropriation, but Mr. Reed does not want it to interfere with the Red Cross campaign for private subscriptions. Democrats contend the citizens are without money to meet the Red Cross appeal, although they hope it will be responded to.

Borah Sizes Up Situation.

Senator Borah (Republican), Idaho, said in a statement last night he was not in favor of any appropriation if it was not necessary. "but if necessary I certainly am, even if it sweeps the Treasury dry."

"I had hoped from the beginning that the Red Cross and other voluntary organizations would be able to take care of the situation, feed the hungry, clothe the naked and administer to the sick. That is the way we all wanted to see it done.

"But the unmistakable proof came to us that the situation was not be-

Royal Train Halts; Princes Rise Early to Inspect Debris of Express.

PARTY SAILS ON LINER

Santander, Spain, Jan. 18 (A.P.).—The Prince of Wales and his brother George rose at dawn today to watch a big derrick clear the track for the royal train which was taking them to the coast for embarkation on their South American tour.

The princes left their Pullman beds when their train was suddenly halted between Ichoux and Lugos, 30 miles southwest of Bordeaux, and they learned an express train had been wrecked ahead of them. Exhibiting much the same curiosity that impels an American pedestrian to watch a steam shovel, the royal pair pulled on their clothes and filed out with the rest of their party to watch the wrecking crew at work.

After several hours a special train brought the party to Santander, where they embarked on the liner Oropesa, which will take them to South America on their salesmanship tour for Great Britain. The liner, which was held for the royal party at the request of Wales, sailed at 10 o'clock tonight.

Altogether, the Englishmen had an adventurous day, which included, besides the railway tie-up, a skiddy automobile trip over frozen roads.

The party left Paris yesterday for this Spanish port and for the first few hours their train clicked swiftly over the rails.

Meanwhile, on the same line, an express train from Spain was shooting through the night. At 30 minutes past midnight it jumped the tracks between Ichoux and Lugos, 30 miles southwest of Bordeaux, plowed the ballast for a half-mile until it halted and thereby blocked the entire right of way.

No one was injured, but the southbound train bearing the prince was halted.

The derailment was believed to have been caused by heavy rains undermining the roadbed. It started rumors circulating that the prince had been involved in the wreck. These were speedily chased down.

French railway officials ordered a special train up from Bayonne with all speed and the passengers on the southbound express were transferred for the remainder of the journey to Spain.

At 1:45 p. m., the party reached Hendaye, which is in France just

BUTLER SLAYS GIRL ON CANDLER ESTATE

Filipino Employe of Soft-Drink Man's Son Then Shoots Himself.

NOT ALLOWED TO MEET

Atlanta, Jan. 18 (A.P.).—Miss Gladys Prix, 19-year-old stenographer, and Jose Cruz, 30-year-old Filipino butler at the home of Asa G. Candler, jr., were found shot to death today in Cruz's parked automobile on the Candler estate. Police said both had been killed with a pistol belonging to Mr. Candler, son of the late soft drink manufacturer.

A DeKalb County coroner's jury returned a verdict of murder and suicide, finding Cruz shot the girl and then killed himself.

A note was reported found in Cruz's room saying: "We are choosing this way out." There was also a second note, scrawled on a child's slate, reading: "This is my last trick, and I hope you'll enjoy the performance."

Cruz was an amateur magician. Police said his employer had been interested in magic for some years, and part of Cruz's duties was assisting in the operation of some of Candler's magic apparatus.

The only motive for the slayings brought out in the coroner's inquest was that Miss Prix's parents had forbidden Cruz to call at their home or to see their daughter. Cruz came to Atlanta in Candler's employ from Manila eight years ago.

Mexico May Seek To Buy U. S. Land

Deputies' Group Suggests Purchasing Territory to End Dispute.

Mexico City, Jan. 18 (A.P.).—Countering a proposal of Senator Ashurst, of Arizona, that the United States buy Lower California from Mexico, a group of national deputies suggested today Mexico buy a small part of American territory, particularly along the Colorado River.

The group, headed by Efrain Pineda, is endeavoring to settle the Colorado River water problem, which is a subject of considerable discussion. It is planned to suggest to President Ortiz Rubio that a fund for the purchase be obtained by national subscription.

Great Rock Crash Changes Contour of Niagara Falls

Erosion Causes Thousands of Tons to Give Way at American Section of Cataract; Metamorphosis Occurs During Darkness of Night.

Niagara Falls, N. Y., Jan. 18 (A.P.).—Thousands of tons of rock broke away from the parapet of the American part of Niagara Falls some time between darkness Saturday night and daylight today and caused the greatest change in the contour of the cataract within the memory of living man.

The breakage, caused by erosion, created a gigantic U-shaped indentation in the brink, estimated by observers to be 150 to 200 feet deep by about 150 feet wide and beginning approximately 300 feet from the bank of Luna Island. Accurate estimate of the extent of the erosion will not be possible until aerial photos have been compared with the previous contour.

The crest of the American falls is 1,030 feet wide, with an average depth of 1.5 feet of water. The broken-up rock formation is piled in immense blocks halfway up the 167-foot cliff at the base of the "U" incision.

Nature's changing of one of its greatest scenic wonders was unwitnessed by man, the work being carried out under the veil of darkness.

Reservation officials reported several rumbling noises were heard between 10 o'clock Saturday night and 6 o'clock this morning.

The new contour of the cataract, despite its wide divergence from the old crest line, would not be noticed by the casual observer. To the experienced eye, however, the change is apparent at once. The "U"-shaped identation first was noticed by an unidentified man in the morning, and news of it spread among residents of Niagara Falls. First official reports

ing taken care of. According to the Red Cross statement in the beginning, they did not have the funds to take care of the situation and at that time the Red Cross was not asking for additional funds.

Defines Senate Temper.

"Under those circumstances Congress had no alternative. No senator, I venaure to believe, wanted to supplant the Red Cross. No senator wants to vote money out of the Treasury for these purposes if there is any voluntary organization ready to do the work. On the other hand, few senators indeed would refuse to vote money to take care of the starving, care for the sick, in the absence of relief from other sources.

"The trouble with this situation is precisely the same as it was with reference to unemployment, and that was an effort to minimize its seriousness and to criticize those who urged its seriousness.

"Now, if there has been an awakening to the real situation and the Red Cross is prepared to take care of the situation, I, for one, shall be happy to know it, but let me say, had it not been for the agitation in Congress, thousands of men, women and children would have bitterly died of hunger and exposure."

Seed Loan Machinery Will Be Ready Today

(Associated Press.)

The larger part of the Government's machinery for loaning $45,000,000 for seed, feed and fertilizer in drought and storm areas embracing more than half the States of the Union will be ready to function today.

Dr. C. W. Warburton, secretary of the national drought relief committee, who will have direct charge, has received word that the field office at St. Louis will be opened today. The office at Memphis, Tenn., also will be opened. Offices at Washington and Grand Forks, N. Dak., were ready before.

Shipments of the printed voucher blanks upon which the approved loans will be paid have been dispatched to the field offices. By the latter part of the week, disbursing officers of the field offices will begin filling out vouchers on approved loans.

With the exception of the voucher forms, all other collateral papers, including promissory notes and crop mortgage papers, by which the loans will be secured, are in readiness.

Warburton said the department had no estimate as to the number of farmers who will receive aid.

Mrs. Crater, Wife Of Jurist, Returns

Whereabouts of Missing Husband Still Puzzle to Police.

New York, Jan. 18 (N.Y.W.N.S.).—Mrs. Joseph Force Crater, of whom the New York County grand jury said, "We have fruitlessly endeavored to induce her to appear before us and give testimony," returned to her apartment at 40 Fifth avenue today for the first time since August 6, when her husband, the Supreme Court justice, disappeared.

Meanwhile the whereabouts of Crater still is a mystery, although reports of his presence have reached police from every point in this country and Cuba.

His vanishing at the start of the political campaign and inception of the inquiry into court scandals caused much speculation.

Film Supply Firm Fire In Istanbul Kills 14

Istanbul, Turkey, Jan. 18 (A.P.).—Fourteen persons were killed in a fire today in a building containing commercial offices and a motion picture supply store. Ten girls were seriously injured.

Of the fourteen who lost their lives seven succumbed to burns, three were asphyxiated and four died in jumping out of windows. The building was in the Galata quarter.

Shorter Skirts Decreed in Paris

Moderate Changes Are Seen in Apparel for Evening Wear.

Paris, Jan. 18 (N.Y.W.N.S.).—Shorter skirts for evening wear have been decreed by Paris fashion houses. This is one of the secrets which the first "openings" will reveal next month, according to indiscreet persons behind the scenes.

Evening dresses won't be exactly short, but they will at least allow the wearer to dance without skirts being trodden upon either by the wearers or by others. Ankle length is to be favored.

Scotch plaids, woolens and jerseys are to be the favorites in day wear, chiefly in light shades of brown. Tailored suits will also be fashionable, especially in dark blue.

TALES OF SUFFERING REACH RED CROSS

Texas and Oklahoma Tell of Families Lacking Food and Clothes.

APPEAL MADE TO D. A. R.

(Associated Press.)

New stories of hunger and hardship were written yesterday into Red Cross records.

Reporting that the last seventeen days had doubled the number receiving drought relief, the organization disclosed that its $10,000,000 drive thus far had brought it $598,000.

An appeal to Daughters of the American Revolution to join in the campaign for funds went out late yesterday from Mrs. Lowell Fletcher Hobart, president general of the organization.

Meantime word came from Texas that 300 families were destitute in Red River County and 200 families in Wilbarger County. A letter from a mother of seven in Texas said the crop had failed and the children were ragged and without food.

An Oklahoma county reported food and clothing exhausted and 500 families to be cared for. The report said: "Destitute does not mean they are actually in need, but are on the verge of starvation and without sufficient clothing to prevent suffering. Should we have a severe blizzard such as we had in January last year, some would actually freeze to death if not cared for. Local people have done all they can to relieve the situation."

One worker reported finding a father and five children barefooted in the snow, but too proud to ask for help.

Memphis reported heavy demands within 100-mile radius, including nearby Mississippi. The report added: "Pleas for help come not only from the small farm owner, but from owners of large plantations who are unable longer to care for their tenants due to exhaustion of resources and lack of credit at the banks which were forced to curtail loans. Many, formerly able to tide over their tenants, are now forced to seek Red Cross help, increasing the number to be cared for by chapters."

Deaths Reach 114 In Mexican Quake

Town of 2,000 Obliterated; 275 Shocks Follow First Tremor.

Mexico City, Jan. 18 (A.P.).—Dr. Rueda, in charge of a relief unit working in the zone devastated by an earthquake Wednesday, reported tonight the town of Miahuatlan had been totally destroyed and twenty or more persons killed.

His report brings the total recorded dead to 114 thus far. Workers are still taking bodies from ruins in the Oaxaca Valley, so the list may be increased.

The observatory at Oaxaca reported 275 earthshocks followed upon the first sharp tremor which wrought great destruction in the city. Miahuatlan, the town reported obliterated, lay 42 miles south of Oaxaca and had 2,000 inhabitants.

Quake Predicted Before Wednesday

Hungarian Locates Great Convulsion in Pacific or in Japan.

Budapest, Hungary, Jan. 18 (A.P.). The world's next great earthquake, predicts Prof. Martin Hanko, will occur between tomorrow and Wednesday somewhere in the western half of the Pacific Ocean or in Japan.

Prof. Hanko, a member of the faculty at Pecs University in South Hungary, discussed his forecasting system with the Associated Press today.

"For many years," he said, "I have been studying earthquakes and have found there is a uniform and natural sequence to such convulsions. My system is based upon the simplest principles of prediction, applied with a highly elaborated scheme of mathematics. Since October I have fixed the dates of approximately eleven earthquakes, all of which developed."

Lobbyists Declare 1931 Is Crucial Year

Characterizing the discussion over responsibility for adequate relief for victims of unemployment as "the acid test of the adequacy of political government to meet the needs of an antisocial and selfish, mechanized efficiency," the People's Lobby, of which Prof. John Dewey is president, in a statement made public yesterday said:

"Nineteen thirty-one will probably determine whether our present form of political government can survive, or whether millions of Americans will embrace communism as the only way of escape from an economic-politico system which disregards the primary rights of producers."

Toscanini's Wife in Italy Hears Him by Rebroadcast

Special Wave Is Used for Concert; Radiophone Links Pair.

New York, Jan. 18 (A.P.).—Arturo Toscanini and the Philharmonic Symphony Orchestra gave a concert in Carnegie Hall today for millions of persons, but especially for Mrs. Arturo Toscanini, in Milan, Italy.

Ever since his American concerts have been broadcast the famous Italian conductor has been eager that his wife in Milan might hear them. Two days ago he asked the Columbia Broadcasting System to make an especial effort so that she might pick up the music on her short wave set.

The program today was rebroadcast by short wave from Schenectady and was heard in Milan by Mrs. Toscanini, "just as clearly as though I were there in the concert hall."

At the conclusion of the playing of "Death and Transfiguration," the final number on the program today, the maestro stepped to the microphone and, in Italian, said to his wife:

"I send you my best greetings. I will sail in two days and I will see you and embrace you."

Just at that moment a transatlantic telephone connection between New York and Milan was completed, and the conductor, off stage, spoke for two minutes to his wife and heard her voice.

The audience in Carnegie Hall, learning by word of mouth the personal drama of the occasion, refused to leave the auditorium and the applause and bravos resounded for many minutes.

HOOVER LAW GROUP MAY REPORT TODAY

Wickersham Commission to Transmit Document to President at Once.

OPINIONS ARE COMPLETE

(Associated Press.)

Unless delayed by circumstances now unforeseen, the law enforcement commission plans to transmit its lengthy prohibition report to President Hoover today or, at least, tomorrow.

This was the forecast yesterday from sources close to the commission. Indication was given that the unannounced causes for withholding the document—whether for printing or for the receipt of the final written opinion from one of the members—had been overcome, and that there should be little further delay.

The report will go to the White House without further consideration by the commission as a whole. The majority statement of the members—described as largely factual, but containing several recommendations for improving the present prohibition situation—has been virtually complete for some time. The writing of at least one lengthy individual opinion, or report, however, was completed only during the middle of last week.

A meeting of the full commission for a final consideration of its completed work was scheduled for last Wednesday, following a week's recess, but this was postponed when only a few of the eleven members arrived in the Capital. Meetings only a few minutes long have been held for the past several days, adjourning each time for lack of a quorum.

Two of the members are in the Middle West, two more in the South, one has gone to the West Coast and another is in Europe, while a seventh, Miss Ada Comstock, president of Radcliffe College, has been ill at her home in Cambridge, Mass.; yesterday only one other member, besides Chairman Wickersham, was in Washington.

If expectations at commission headquarters are fulfilled, the report will be given to the press within a comparatively short time after it arrives at the White House, to be held in confidence until it is submitted by the President to Congress. Some estimates have placed the time of its release to the public as early as tomorrow or Wednesday.

This would give Mr. Hoover very little time to study it, however, particularly if he does more than write a brief message of transmittal to Congress.

British Aviatrix Halted Again on Peiping Flight

Warsaw, Jan. 18 (A.P.).—Miss Amy Johnson, British aviatrix, who cracked up her plane near here recently, on an attempted flight from England to Peiping, China, took off today for Berlin, but was forced down by motor trouble near Klodawa, halfway between Warsaw and Posen.

She made a safe landing, however, and expected to continue her flight to Berlin tomorrow. She expressed the opinion that the trouble was caused by the impurity of the gasoline. A mechanic was sent from here to assist her.

Fire Loss Set at $250,000.

Barranca, Colombia, Jan. 18 (A.P.), This Magdalena River port was partly destroyed last night by a fire which caused damage estimated at a quarter of a million dollars.

EFFORT TO RESTORE TRADE SHOWS GAINS

FOOD PRICES ARE LOWER

Efforts on the part of the Federal Government, States and private interests to bring about improvement in business conditions and reduce unemployment are showing signs of progress in some communities. Optimism is increasing in parts of the United States, Canada and some of the Latin-American nations.

Government officials and captains of industry agree that the first step toward recovery in Europe is the resumption of normal buying in the United States.

Reports from the South indicate better conditions in the textile industry. The price of cotton, middling, at New York, and iron and steel prices are holding their own. Brighter prospects in Argentina, Canada and a few other countries have helped the situation in the United States.

Outlook Seems Better.

A report issued by the Department of Commerce yesterday says that the general outlook in Argentina is "slightly more optimistic" than it was a week prior to the last official information from there, and "the general tone of trade" in Canada is more "optimistic."

"Weekly business indicators available to the Department of Commerce for the week ended January 10," a Government statement says, "show that increases occurred over the preceding week in the volume of bank debits outside New York City, the average prices paid for representative stocks and bonds, and the Federal reserve reatio. Declines from the previous period were noted in cotton receipts at principal markets, loan and discounts of Federal Reserve member banks and interest rates on call money.

"Time money rates registered no change. The number of business failures rose during the week.

"Wholesale prices in general, as measured by the weekly index of 120 principal commodities, were fractionally off from a week ago. As contrasted with wholesale prices of a year ago, decline occurred without exception.

Bank Loans Smaller.

"Bank loans and discounts of member banks were smaller and the Federal Reserve ratio higher for the period ended January 10, when compared with the corresponding week in 1930."

Wholesale and retail prices of food are still decreasing to the consumer, according to figures compiled by the Bureau of Labor Statistics. Butter, for instance, dropped from 53.5 cents a pound November 15, 1929, to 45.4 cents November 15, 1930.

The cost of various articles of food combined shows a decrease of 11.4 per cent November 15, 1930, as compared with November 15, 1929, and a decrease of 2.0 per cent November 15, 1930, as compared with October 15, 1930.

DO-X May Be Sold in Cuba.

Lisbon, Jan. 18 (A.P.).—Capt. Friedrich Christiansen, commander of the German flying boat DO-X, said tonight the big seaplane may be sold in Cuba after it completes its visit to the New World shortly.

HOUSE PLANS DRIVE UPON SUPPLY BILLS

Leaders Would Sidetrack All Other Measures to Avert Jam.

SPEED ACTS TO SENATE

(Associated Press.)

An intensive drive to dispose of all annual supply bills by early February to avoid an excuse for a special session has been instituted by House Republican leaders.

All other major legislation has been sidetracked. The administration's $74,000,000 naval construction program, the Wickersham proposal to tighten the padlocking proceedings and the Capper-Kelly retail price bill have been shoved aside, at least temporarily.

With little more than six weeks remaining, none of the regular appropriation bills have become law. Although the House has approved six, the Senate has acted on but the billion-dollar Treasury-Postoffice bill, and it is in dispute between the two branches over an employes' salary raising provision.

Speed Remaining Measures.

Confronted by this situation, Speaker Longworth and other leaders are striving to send the remaining measures to the Senate soon, in order that it may not contend that insufficient time for consideration was allowed. Should the bills fail of final passage by March 4, departments affected would be unable to operate after next July 1, unless President Hoover convened Congress in special session.

Should the legislative jam in the Senate block consideration of the measures until the last days of the session, a small group could force an extra assembly through a filibuster.

Although miscellaneous legislation will be considered in the House today, it will resume work tomorrow on the appropriation bill for the Justice, State, Commerce and Labor Departments. Wet forces have planned a concerted action against allotments for 500 more prohibition agents next year, purchasing of alcoholic avidence and undercover agents. This contest is expected to delay the program which calls for taking up of the billion dollar independent offices supply bill Thursday.

Shoals Failure Seen.

Hope for settlement of the Muscle Shoals controversy over the Senate's Government operation proposal has diminished in the House. However, a Democratic move is under way to have the House conference committee discharged. Little success is expected at this time unless Republicans are assured that the President would decline to approve the Norris plan. In that event the Government operation proposal might be disposed of in Congress, to be vetoed by the President.

After the supply bills have been passed the Capper-Kelly resale price bill will have its innings. It has been pending for nearly a decade. Strong opposition to it has developed on both sides of the House during recent weeks. Efforts to send it back to the House interstate commerce committee are to be made by its opponents.

The measure would prohibit retail sale of trade-mark articles below the price fixed by the manufacturer.

Book on Old Rome Given Pope, King

Mussolini Also Gets Copy of Work Begun by Late American Savant.

Rome, Jan. 18 (N.Y.W.N.S.).—Dr. Thomas Ashby, famous English archeologist, regarded as the greatest living authority on ancient Rome and the countryside surrounding it, has just presented to King Victor Emmanuel of Italy, to Pope Pius XI and to Prime Minister Benito Mussolini copies of the "Typographical Dictionary of Ancient Rome," which the late Prof. Samuel Bell Platner, of Western Reserve University, Cleveland, had almost completed before his death.

Mrs. Platner, widow of the Cleveland savant, asked Prof. Ashby to finish the work started by her husband and helped in the undertaking. It was at her request that copies of the finished book were presented to the king, the Pope and Il Duce.

CHEST SPECIAL UNIT WILL REPORT TODAY

Group Seeking $1,000,000 of Entire Total to Gather at Willard Hotel.

DRIVE AIMS OUTLINED

The Special Gifts unit of the Community Chest, which has in charge raising $1,000,000 of the $1,930,154.40 sought, will hold its first report meeting at 1 o'clock this afternoon at the Willard Hotel. This unit seeks only gifts of $500, and will end next Monday, when the regular solicitation of the Chest will begin.

For the benefit of new residents of Washington who may not yet know of the work of the Community Chest, Edward F. Colladay, chairman of the campaign committee, last night outlined its policy and aims.

"The economy of the Community Chest," he said, "has already been demonstrated—6 or 7 per cent against 15 to 20 per cent. This means that 93 or 94 cents out of every dollar raised can go into service under the Community Chest plan as against 80 to 85 per cent under the old unplanned method of competitive solicitation.

"Through a very competent budget committee, the Community Chest works continually for the improvement of methods of its member organizations. Recommendations for improvement have in part resulted from surveys which the Community Chest has financed through the Council of Social Agencies, including in the past year the great survey of health and social agencies and hospitals carried on by the American Public Health Association."

Nevada Asks Hospital For Workers on Dam

(Associated Press.)

Nevada wants a hospital for the veterans who are expected to flock to that State to help build Hoover Dam.

George Malone, State engineer, was in Washington yesterday, and announced he would go before the House veterans subcommittee next Friday to urge establishment of a Federal hospital. He called attention to the clause in the contract for Hoover Dam and the Boulder Canyon project power plant that says contractors must give preference to veterans or American citizens for the jobs.

Corporation Head Ends Life by Rope

C. H. L. Flinterman Served as War Industries Board Division Chief.

Jackson, Mich., Jan. 18 (A.P.).—The body of Carl H. L. Flinterman, president of the Wilcox-Rich Corporation, was found hanging from a steam pipe in a room of the Hayes Hotel here at 7:30 o'clock this morning. Dr. Jason B. Meads, coroner of Jackson County, said Flinterman committed suicide.

Flinterman, who was 54 years old, was chairman of the pressed steel division of the War Industries Board. His home was in Birmingham, Detroit suburb. He registered at the hotel Saturday evening, asking to be called at 7 a. m. today. The night clerk and porter broke into the room after Flinterman failed to answer the telephone. Towels had been stuffed into the crack under the door to deaden sound.

Relatives were unable to advance any reason for the act. They said Flinterman apparently was in good health and had no financial worries.

Theft Held Motive As Athlete Is Slain

Riverton, N. J., Jan. 18 (N.Y.W.N.S.).—Slugged, chloroformed and then left to be poisoned by the carbon monoxide gas escaping from his own automobile, Harry Burns, 23, former high school athlete, was found in a dying condition early today in the garage at the rear of his home.

Burns, who was more than 6 feet tall, died two hours later at West Jersey Hospital, Camden. His watch and money were missing and authorities announced their conviction that robbery constituted the sole motive for the crime.

There were lacerations on his head and his clothing was ripped and torn to shreds. Because of his strength, as well as the evidence of the melee in the garage, investigators held to the theory that two or more men were required to overpower him. They said that after hammering him to the floor his attackers turned on the engine to make certain he would be killed by the fumes.

SLAYER SEALS LIPS WITH 'NO REGRETS'

Port Arthur, Tex., Police See Father's Vengeance in Killing of Man.

DAUGHTER SHOT DEC. 28

Port Arthur, Tex., Jan. 18 (A.P.).—Maintaining steadfastly he had "done nothing to regret" A. B. Johnson, oil refinery foreman, kept close silence today while police could offer only their theory that a father's idea of retribution prompted the fatal shooting last night of Ottis Lee Adams, 22. Johnson was at liberty under $10,000 bond today, charged with the murder.

Johnson resolutely refused to say why he slew the youth, an occasional companion of Johnson's 16-year-old daughter, Elizabeth, who died of a mysterious bullet wound less than a month ago.

Miss Johnson was found shot to death December 28 in an automobile in front of the First Methodist Church South, here. Robert L. Williams, sophomore at the University of Texas and son of the Rev. H. W. Williams, presiding elder of the Austin district of the Methodist church, told investigators he had taken her to the church, hoping the pastor would be able to effect a reconciliation in a lovers' quarrel between them. He said he found the girl dead when he returned to the machine. He was charged with murder but released when a grand jury refused to return an indictment.

Police Chief M. B. Word today gave his explanation of the shooting. "Adams had been going with Miss Johnson, as had Williams, although Williams had been away at school.

"When Williams learned she had been going with Adams—a married man—he objected. I am not going to speculate as to the motive Mr. Johnson had. He is widely respected and well liked here."

Mr. and Mrs. Lee Adams, parents of the slain man, started late today for De Quincy, La., their home, with his body.

"All of these rumors about my son can't be true," the mother sobbed. "I wish he could have died a natural death at home. He can't tell his side of it. He's gone."

Adams' estranged wife, with whom he had planned to attempt reconciliation today at Vinton, La., was too ill to come here, officials learned. It was thought she might be able to assist in clearing up the case.

British Rail Men To Fight Pay Cut

Strong Action Threatened Against Proposals; 250,000 Weavers Out.

London, Jan. 18 (A.P.).—Joy over settlement of the South Wales coal strike was mixed with gloom tonight over a shutdown in the cotton industry, affecting 250,000 weavers.

Meanwhile an anxious period in a third great British industry begins tomorrow with the meeting of the national wage board to discuss proposed reductions in the pay of railway employes. C. T. Cramp, general secretary of the National Union of Railway Men, in a speech at Bedford tonight said the whole future of British railways was at stake. "It may be we shall have to take a very strong line of action," he said.

The chief proposals of the employers are reduction of adult railway men's wages of 6 shillings weekly, and a weekly minimum of 38 shillings instead of the present 40, with other reductions for juniors and in other special cases.

MOB RUMOR FALSE, TOWN DROPS ARMS

Maryville, Mo., Is Calm After Night of Terror Awaiting Attack.

MILITARY IS SENT HOME

Maryville, Mo., Jan. 18 (A.P.).—A Sabbath calm today prevailed in Maryville, little northwest Missouri College town, where an armed citizenry last night patrolled the streets in answer to an unverified rumor that a group of Negroes intended vengeance for the lynching of one of their race.

At the request of Mayor W. C. Garrett, Gov. Henry S. Caulfield also called out the local company of the National Guard. The guard was demobilized at 5 a. m. today, when no raiders appeared.

The anxious moments of last night still were the prime topic of conversation on street corners and in homes today. A feeling of relief, however, had superseded the grim attitude of preparedness manifest a few hours earlier.

The rumors that resulted in the men of the section seizing firearms and in some cases corn knives and hurrying to downtown Maryville, started with the receipt of a telephone call by Mrs. L. L. Edwards. She said an "Alice Ward," of St. Joseph, Mo., had informed her of a rumor that several automobile loads of Negroes had departed for Maryville from St. Joseph and Kansas City.

It was feared by the citizenry that the reported raid was being made as an act of vengeance for the lynching, January 12, of Raymond Gunn, who had confessed attacking and slaying Velma Colter, 19-year-old school teacher. Gunn was taken from the custody of Sheriff Harve England as that officer was escorting the prisoner to the courthouse for trial. He was shackled to the roof of the little country schoolhouse where Miss Colter taught and the scene of the alleged attack. The building then was soaked with gasoline and the Negro burned to death atop the flaming pyre.

St. Joseph, Mo., Jan. 18 (A.P.).—Miss Alice Ward, who identified herself as a saleswoman, tonight said she had telephoned Mrs. L. L. Edwards at Maryville, Mo., saying she had heard a group of Negroes were planning to raid the city.

The report of the contemplated raid, she said, had been overheard here as a rumor.

Former Greek King Denies Coup Plan.

Bucharest, Jan. 18 (A.P.).—Former King George of Greece tonight answered rumors that he was seeking to claim his throne, saying the situation at present is unfavorable for any such declarations on his part.

Flood in Mississippi Valley This Spring Held Unlikely

Long, Dry Spell Eliminates Danger, Sapping Flow of Streams and Leaving Earth Extremely Porous; Engineering Work Making Fine Progress.

(Associated Press.)

The long dry spell with which the country was afflicted last summer left at least one note of cheer in the Mississippi Valley—there is little danger of a flood this spring.

In addition to sapping the flow of the streams, it left the earth a porous sponge, capable of absorbing millions of tons of water.

The low levels of the river gave engineers an opportunity to push forward their work of building and strengthening the levees that go toward the new flood control system for the Father of Waters.

Army engineers yesterday reported the Mississippi at an extremely low stage and possibilities of a flood during the spring months practically nil.

Col. Ernest Graves, a member of the Mississippi River Commission, said that already about 60 per cent of the area affected by the flood control project is reasonably safe from flood danger.

The principal work extends from Cape Girardeau, Mo., to the gulf. The plans provide for raising and strengthening levees along the Mississippi, except at the heads of the Boeuf and Atchafalaya Basins; protecting levees planned in the side lowlands; reducing the height of river side levees near Birds Point and construction of a set-back levee from Birds Point to New Madrid, Mo., and a masonry-controlled spillway at Bonnet Carre, about 20 miles above New Orleans, for its protection.

From September 1, 1929, to September 1, 1930, a total of 53,000,000 cubic yards of earth had been placed in the levees.

The total project requires moving about 500,000,000 cubic yards of earth, or "over twice as much as that excavated from the Panama Canal."

Approximately $100,000,000 had been spent by the Government on flood control work up to October 30, 1930, since congressional enactment of the flood control act in 1928.

The Government's work on the Bonnet Carre Spillway is expected to be completed late this year.

Local and Government interests have failed to reach agreement over property lying within the spillway and courts now are attempting to settle the matter.

American People Make Diet More Diversified

(Associated Press.)

The dietary habits of the American people are changing.

R. W. Dunlap, Assistant Secretary of Agriculture, has found that since the World War there has been a trend toward a more diversified diet, with a preference for more vegetables, fruit, sugar and dairy products. Consumption of bread, corn meal and other cereals has declined.

Since 1915 there has been an increase of 36 per cent in the per capita consumption of vegetables. Also, the average American now eats about a third more sugar than before, about a fourth more milk and dairy products, a fifth more vegetables, and until very recent years a little more meat.

In the last five years there has been a decrease of 30 per cent in the consumption of grains for human food to an average per capita consumption of 240 pounds annually.

In the meats there has been a gain of 15 per cent in the consumption of pork and lard to an average of 84 pounds per person, but a decline in the use of beef and veal from 70 pounds in 1918 to 58 pounds per year in 1929.

When Stick Pusher Herds Over Hump, It's Plane Talk

Puzzling "Slanguage" of Air Pilots Embraces "Banana Peelings," as Well as "Pants," "Shingles" and "Old Ladies' Home," But All Is Explained.

Los Angeles, Jan. 18 (A.P.).—The stick-pusher herded his "tin Lizzie" over the hump, where he hit zero-zero and had to stand her on her ear, taking it in the face while he horsed down to count the insulators. With his flippers flopped and the coffee mills straight under, he laid it on the railroad, gave her the gun and headed for the old ladies' home.

This is the mystifying phraseology of this modern day in the air transportation service. The lingo of the pilot is rolled off the tongue of Si Morehouse, chief pilot of Transcontinental-Western Air Express Lines, for the education of newcomers to the company's air mail and passenger service.

Translated into ordinary language, the account says:

The pilot flew his trimotored Ford plane across country, hitting low visibility and being forced to bank sharply, looking through the opened cockpit window while he nosed down above a line of railway telegraph poles. With the ailerons tilted and the motors headed down, he skimmed low above the railroad tracks to guide him, opened the feed throttle wide and headed for the home airport.

The lingo is explained as follows:

A "stick pusher," or pilot, "herds" or flies his plane from point to point.

"Zero-zero"—No or low visibility.

"Horsing down"—Nosing toward earth.

"Counting the insulators"—Being low enough to see telegraph poles.

"Lay it on the railroad"—Fly low, following the tracks.

"Give her the gun"—Open the feed throttle.

"The old ladies' home"—The home airport.

"A milk route"—Short feeder airline, disdained by flying aces.

"The iron compass"—Railroad tracks followed as a guide in storms.

"Windmill"—Propeller.

"Big Bertha"—Thirty-passenger Fokker plane; a 12-passenger is a "gelophy."

"A duck"—An amphibian plane.

"Shingles"—Wing covering; that on a Ford plane is "the washboard."

"Banana peelings"—Cowling between the cylinders.

A cylinder is a "can," or a "barrel."

"Pants"—Streamlined coverings over the wheels.

Occasionally an airport gets a radio "jugful"—A coded order to "Please hold westbound until cleared by dispatcher."

The code word "blueboy" means "rush confirmation."

FRENCH MOB RIOTS OVER WHEAT PRICE

Screen Is Torn as Movie House Shows Picture of Premier Steeg.

SEE HIGHER LIVING COST

Paris, Jan. 18 (A.P.).—The government's proposed increase in the price of wheat caused a riot of protest in a motion picture house today, when the picture of Premier Steeg was flashed on the screen.

Several persons in the audience rushed to the stage and tore down the canvas. An uproar followed and continued so long that the manager had to refund to all patrons the admission price. He temporarily closed the house, which is on the Boulevard des Italiens.

Police arrested two of the disturbers, who said the protest was against an increase in the cost of living which, they said, would follow a rise in the price of wheat.

The proposal of Victor Boret, minister of agriculture, to raise the price of wheat from $1.50 a bushel to approximately $2 has caused a sharp difference of opinion with Leon Meyer, undersecretary of state for commerce.

A special council of the ministers, to be presided over by President Doumergue, has been called to meet at the Elysee Palace tomorrow morning. M. Meyer has been especially invited to discuss the proposals with the council. He has strenuously opposed the measure, even threatening to resign if it is adopted.

The chamber is about evenly divided on the question. Deputies from the rural districts favor Boret's idea, as a protection to the farmers, while members representing cities and seaports oppose the plan, contending an increase in the price of wheat will raise the cost of living in general.

American-Born Countess Is Dead

Descendant of Old German Noble Family Admitted Forgery in 1926.

Potsdam, Germany, Jan. 18 (A.P.).—Countess Hessolde Schnable, who was born in St. Louis in 1886, died today at a hospital after illness of a year.

She was the widow of Prof. Schnabel, an eminent toxicologist, but was the daughter of Count Hesso von Ilsinigen-Westerburg, scion of one of the oldest families in Germany, who emigrated to America in the early 80s, marrying Margarete Meyer, of St. Louis, in October, 1884.

In 1926 the countess was the cause of a Potsdam society scandal, which caused considerable notoriety when she admitted forging a will to obtain the estate of her husband and was sentenced to three months in jail.

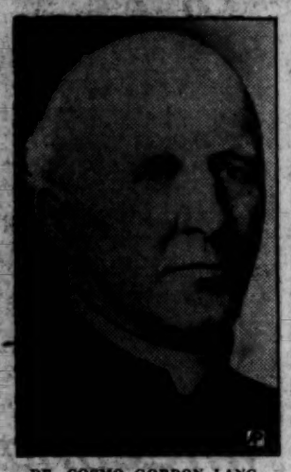
Archbishop of Canterbury Must Rest Three Months

Severe Neuralgia of Face Attributed by Doctors to Overwork.



DR. COSMO GORDON LANG.

London, Jan. 18 (A.P.).—The Archbishop of Canterbury was ordered today to take a rest of at least three months by his physicians. An official statement issued from the archbishop's residence, Lambeth Palace, and signed by his doctors read as follows:

"The Archbishop of Canterbury is suffering from a severe neuralgia of the fifth nerve. The fundamental cause of this, in the archbishop's case, is overwork. In order to recover health it will be necessary for the archbishop to take a complete rest for at least three months.

"It is to be recalled that a year or more ago the archbishop was ill from a duodenal ulcer. From this he made a complete recovery and carried through the responsible duties incidental to the Lambeth conference without difficulty, and until last month his health was excellent.

The Most Rev. Cosmo Gordon Lang became Archbishop of Canterbury in 1928. He is 68 years old.

Neuralgia of the fifth nerve is a common complaint. This nerve begins at the gasserian ganglion at the base of the brain and covers all the sensory nerves of the face.

Neuralgia may occur at any part of the nerve and has a particularly profound effect if it attacks the gasserian ganglion.

GREAT ROCK CRASH HITS NIAGARA FALLS

were made to police headquarters by a patrolman at 2:30 p. m. Shortly afterward the news was broadcast by radio.

Meanwhile, tourists from all parts of the world were photographing the cataract, unaware that its luring beauty had undergone a natural metamorphosis—a change that always is taking place although not to such a great extent. The average erosion of the American falls is estimated at one inch a year.

New York, Jan. 18 (A.P.).—The crash in Niagara Falls today occurred about three-fourths the distance from the American shore to Goat Island, which divides the Canadian and American sections.

The Canadian Horseshoe Fall, 155 feet high with a curving crest line of about 2,600 feet, had been cutting back 2.3 feet a year since 1906, after more than a century at a greater rate.

Prior to the crash the American Fall, 165 feet high and 1,400 broad, had shown negligible change in appearance for centuries.

Luna Island, near which the crash occurred, is a small island about a hundred square feet. A narrow bridge of 150 feet connects it with Goat Island, passing over the thin stream known as "The Bridal Veil."

Geologists have ascertained that the falls and river are 25,000 years old, and during that time the changes in the entire line of the falls have been few and slight. The water has always remained clear, its grandeur drawing 2,000,000 or more people annually.

Parks on both the American and Ontario shores are owned by the governments.

COLONIAL LANDMARK THREATENED BY FIRE

Thousands Witness Blaze in Structure Where Lafayette Once Lived.

ORIGIN HELD SUSPICIOUS

planned to tear it down, to make way for a real estate subdivision.

The building, recently known in Washington as "the retreat house," was once the home of officers of the Colonial Army, and Marquise de Lafayette lived there as the guest of American officers for several months. During his sojourn there, according to legend, he was visited on a number of occasions by Gen. Washington, and the sight of the two officers walking together through the grounds was a familiar one.

About 1890 Col. George Truesdale planned to tear the old structure down and build a large horseshoe-shaped hotel on the site, but the plans were dropped.

Was Girls' Seminary.

Then for many years the building was occupied as a seminary for girls, who came from all parts of the country to attend the exclusive institution, called "Washington College."

When the World War broke out, and this country entered it, another change came. The owners of Washington College turned it over to the Chesapeake & Potomac Telephone Co. as a dormitory for the numerous young women employed during those troublous times.

It was during its last period of active service as a place of habitation that the old building became the "Retreat House."

In 1921 the Very Rev. Paschasius Heriz, of the Order of Barefoot Carmelites, bought the property and converted it into a national house of retreat for women.

Carmelites Had Property.

Prominent women from various parts of the archdiocese frequently made week-end retreats to the house, living the lives of the cloistered nuns during the period.

In 1923 the Carmelite Fathers established the Shrine of the Little Flower in the house dedicated to the honor of St. Teresa, a Carmelite nun.

The retreats conducted there were frequently directed by some of the foremost preachers of the diocese.

Three years ago the Carmelite Fathers sold the property, in order to devote their efforts exclusively to the work associated with the monastery at 150 Rhode Island avenue northeast.

DE BOE GIRL TO BARE ADDITIONAL SECRETS

charges her ex-secretary with buying out of her own checking account.

The flaming haired actress said she was angry because her faith in people was gone. "That's why I wept on the stand."

"I shall never trust any one again," she said bitterly.

"And then she sits up there on the stand and sneers at me. I used to think she had a sweet face, but now she looks so hard."

Miss Bow had more to say about Daisy's assertion that the famous hair was hennaed.

"My hair has always been red. At times, for different pictures, I've had it dyed. Once black, another time I was a blonde, just like Daisy. Anybody seeing her in court can tell hers has been bleached.

"The thing I hate worst of all is having to pass up that picture 'City Streets.' I'm broken hearted over that because it was a big dramatic part, not the sort of thing I have been doing at all."

Miss Bow will be called as a rebuttal witness, David Clark, prosecutor, said, and be given a chance to refute the story told by Miss De Boe.

"And I have other witnesses, also," he said, "who will testify that the De Boe girl's testimony is largely self-serving."

Nathan Freedman, defense counsel, expects to have Miss De Boe on the stand throughout tomorrow morning's two-hour session. Unless cross-examination is unexpectedly lengthy, he said she probably would finish in that time. Six or seven other defense witnesses will follow.

Miss Bow, who has expressed a desire to attend court to hear Daisy "tell all," will not be present tomorrow. Studio officials late today said she would be unable to appear. She is expected to be able, however, to testify when called in rebuttal later in the week.

UNCONSCIOUS GIRL FOUND; 2 ARE HELD

Young Married Woman and Sister Charge They Were Mistreated.

AUTO RIDE IS DESCRIBED

Special to The Washington Post.

Annapolis, Md., Jan. 18.—Two men were held for further hearing here today, after Mrs. Jessie Dice, 17, was found unconscious in the middle of Second street, Eastport, late last night. The woman, who is married to a hospital corpsman attached to the General Naval Hospital here, and her sister, Clare Lewis, 18, single, are alleged to have gone for a ride with the men.

The men, Milton Hardesty and Gilbert Norfolk, both in their early twenties, were released under $500 bail, furnished by Buck Ford, Lothian, Anne Arundel County, where both young men live. Hardesty and Norfolk were arrested today by Sheriff R. Glenn Prout, who charged them with knowledge of the plight of the girls. When arraigned before Police Justice Louis M. Hopkins the men waived a hearing.

Police report that Mrs. Dice was found in the middle of the street, with her clothing very nearly torn from her body and several teeth broken. She was brought to the Emergency Hospital here for treatment.

Mrs. Dice and her sister claim, according to police, that they were seriously mistreated by the men, who, they alleged, threw them from the car in front of Eastport School. The unmarried sister is said to have found her way to the home of a relative in a delirious condition. The girls' father is Harry Lewis, of Severn avenue, painter at the Naval Academy.

According to Sheriff Prout, the men tell an entirely different story. They allege that the girls went for a ride voluntarily and that one of the two consumed considerable liquor. When the time came to go home the girls asked to be "let out" near their home. Hardesty and Norfolk told Sheriff Prout. They added that the one sister promised to look after the other, who, they said, had imbibed too freely. All knowledge of the fact that one girl was found with her clothing badly torn was denied by the men.

Bad-Check Writer Collected $75,000

Dencheff, Slain When He Resisted Arrest, Had Long Career.

New York, Jan. 18 (A.P.).—Stephen Dencheff, alias James Lodi, and about 25 other names, collected about $75,000 from sixteen banks through forged checks before a bullet ended his career in a Broadway office building, Charles A. Goodspeed, investigator for the banks, said today.

Dencheff was shot resisting two private detectives assigned to arrest him after he had been led into a trap in the office of Louis B. Wolfe, a steamship agent, whom Dencheff met previously while buying a ticket to Germany to escape arrest. Wolfe and his wife and daughter were charmed by the imposing looking Dencheff and awed by his "power in the motion picture world."

Thirty-two indictments had been returned against Dencheff and fifteen more were being drawn up.

Former Society Woman, Dead, Lies Unclaimed

Pittsburgh, Pa., Jan. 18 (A.P.).—The body of Mrs. Cecelia Marchand, once prominent in Pittsburgh society and a schoolmate of Evelyn Nesbit, former wife of Harry K. Thaw, lay unclaimed in the city morgue tonight. It was found in a poorly furnished room yesterday and was identified by the morgue superintendent, John Black.

Black said the woman was married to Dr. John L. Marchand in 1902 and that they separated. Dr. Marchand is believed to be in Texas.

Body of Teacher Believed in Ditch

Searchers Dig Holes in Ice After Finding Pajamas; Man Being Held.

Fort Morgan, Colo., Jan. 18 (A.P.).—Officers who announced an unidentified man was being held in connection with the disappearance November 16 of Miss Enid Marriott, Wiggins, Colo., school teacher, tonight expressed belief solution of the case was imminent.

Convinced the girl's body would be found in Bijou Irrigation Ditch, several men dug holes in ice covering the water, and found a suit of pajamas, identified as the girl's, in the ditch. Other personal effects of the teacher had been found nearby previously.

Authorities promised an important announcement in the case tomorrow. Other new evidence, with a bearing on the case, also has been unearthed, it was said.

GRAPE JUICE FIRM'S HEADS FACE ARREST

U. S. Attorney Plans Issue of Warrants Today in Kansas City.

"SILLY," SAYS MANAGER

Kansas City, Jan. 18 (A.P.).—Alleging conspiracy to violate the prohibition law, William A. Vandeventer, United States district attorney, today said warrants probably would be issued tomorrow for officials of the Ukiah Grape Products, Inc., retailer of unfermented fruit juices.

Twenty-three employes of the concern were arrested yesterday in a raid by Federal prohibition agents. Those taken into custody were attending a sales conference of Kansas City employes.

All of those arrested except A. E. Brunett, local manager of the company, were released by Federal prohibition officers. Those freed were released on their own recognizance to appear before a United States commissioner of called.

No formal charges have been lodged against Mr. Brunett, but H. L. Duncan, special agent in charge of the raid, said he would be arraigned tomorrow on a warrant charging conspiracy to violate the Federal prohibition law. Mr. Brunett's only comment was that the charge was "silly."

Mr. Duncan said salesmen explained verbally to customers how to cause the grape juice to become wine. Such instructions, either verbal or written, constitute a violation of the prohibition laws, Mr. Vandeventer said.

Federal agents said the company had been operating in Kansas City since October 6, 1930.

All responsibility for the raid was taken by Mr. Duncan. He declared he had received no instructions from prohibition department officials in Washington.

Bibles to Aid Sick, If Sober, Offered

Proposal in 16th Century Is Revealed by Early Lottery Ticket.

Baltimore, Jan. 18 (N.Y.W.N.S.).—An antiquated lottery ticket which led to discovery of the offer of an early governor to provide Bibles to heal Maryland's sick, if they would stay sober while reading them, has come to light here.

According to Dr. Martin J. Hanna, of the University of Maryland, the early royal governor, Francis Nicholson (1694-1698), shared in the popular belief of his day that reading the Scriptures was a good remedy for ill health, but he lacked equal faith in a still more popular remedy of the period, spiritus frumenti.

Dr. Hanna, owner of the ticket, after he had explained its part in early Maryland medical history to the Osler Historical Club last night, said it was believed to have been one issued in a lottery to raise funds for the building of the University Hospital. It was dated 1812.

Blasted Stump Fractures Skull.

Dayton, Oreg., Jan. 18 (A.P.).—Edward Clow, 17, of Uniondale, ran behind a barn to await explosion of a charge of dynamite in a tree stump. A section of the stump was blown over the barn, fell on his head and fractured his skull.

Gamblers Banned at Miami As Blue Law Battle Rages

Millionaires Line Up on One Side, With Demand for Closed Town, While Business and Tradesmen Urge Liberality; Night Life Continues.

Miami Beach, Fla., Jan. 18. (A.P.).—A "keep out" sign for gamblers firmly tacked over the municipal doorway, resident of this winter playground today awaited developments in the drive of the socially and financially exclusive committee of 100 to rid the resort of statute violators.

The campaign took the form of a contest, with the socially elect on one side, business and tradesmen on the other, and the municipal council in the guise of a referee striving to please both parties.

Gamblers and bookmakers watched curiously along the sidelines with residents of the resort.

The millionaires, generaled by Joseph H. Adams and Clayton Sedgewick Cooper, and representing members of the committee of 100, inaugurated the campaign with a demand for a tightly lidded town during the winter months. The penalty for failure, Adams said, would be withdrawals of investments by himself and other wealthy land and estate owners. Adams holds city property valued at $2,000,000, he said.

The business and trades men took up the gantlet in favor of an open town, as they reviewed prospects of a slim winter season in event the place went "blue law."

Mayor Val C. Cleary hewed firmly to the line of law enforcement in a public statement to the delegation of millionaires. Later, however, with the plea of the business and tradesmen for a retraction, the mayor said the council would adopt a "liberal policy" in regard to entertainment features.

"I am no long-haired reformer," he said.

Dr. Richard Mead, president of the city council, said there would be no "blue laws" passed, but he and his conferees would enforce the law.

A sidelight of the situation was the arrest last night of eight men on vagrancy charges. Among them were well-known local characters.

Another sidelight was the issuance of a temporary injunction by Federal Judge W. B. Sheppard, closing the Picnic Two Bits Club, night club in Miami, pending hearing on a padlock order.

In the meantime reports were that local night clubs, in many of which gambling casinos are said to be operated, entertained the usual number of patrons last night. One or two clubs that are said to have gambling as their sole entertainment feature also were reported to have operated.

Were On Visit to Mother.

The two brothers and their wives were on a trip to visit their mother, Mrs. Luther Gaw, in Charlottesville. Bruce Gaw said that he was traveling a good distance behind his brother's car, having stopped to correct a minor engine defect. Upon reaching a curve on a downgrade, he saw his brother's car capsized on an embankment, he said. The accident had apparently occurred when an effort was made to round the curve, Mr. Gaw said.

Aided by colored men passing along the road, Mr. Gaw extricated the bodies of his brother and sister-in-law from the capsized car and took them to a physician in Gordonsville. They were then taken to the University Hospital at Charlottesville.

Mrs. Gaw never regained consciousness, having sustained multiple fractures. She died at 4:50 o'clock yesterday morning. Mr. Gaw suffered a fracture of the skull, a severe scalp wound and a compound fracture of the right arm. He has a fighting chance to recover, physicians at the Charlottesville hospital reported.

Mrs. Gaw is survived by her mother, Mrs. Willie Lynn, of 1327 Tenth street northwest. Mr. Gaw and his brother are employed by the Howard Cleaning Co.

Accident Held Unavoidable.

Acting Coroner Alpon Y. Bennett after hearing testimony, declared that the accident in which Baker was killed was unavoidable, and Sherman was released. Sherman said he was driving south on the turnpike, about one-half mile south of Frederick, when he knocked the man down.

Glaring headlights of cars approaching in the opposite direction prevented him from seeing Mr. Baker, who was walking alongside of the road on his way home from a visit to relatives in Frederick. Sherman placed the man in his automobile and took him to the Frederick City Hospital, where he was pronounced dead.

Mr. Baker is survived by his wife and four sons.

Jennie Smith, 29 years old, was yesterday treated at Providence Hospital for bruises received when she was struck by an automobile driven by John Donnely, of Falls Church, Va., at the intersection of Pennsylvania avenue and First street southeast.

Held as Reckless Driver.

Donnely was arrested and charged with reckless driving at the Sixth Precinct Police Station. Jennie Smith lives at Twelfth street southeast near A street.

Hazel Gray, colored, 6 years old, of Thirteenth street northeast, near H street, was seriously hurt yesterday when she was struck, at Maryland avenue and Thirteenth street northeast, by an automobile said to have been driven by Frederick M. Gerabner, 40 years old, of Twentieth street, near Douglas street northeast.

The girl was removed to Casualty Hospital, where it was found she had a fractured skull.

Leader of Atheists Objects to Profanity

Proposal in 16th Century Is Revealed by Early Lottery Ticket.

"How to Swear Without Acknowledging God" was the subject of Albert D. Bell, president of the Washington Chapter of the American Association for the Advancement of Atheism, who lectured at the meeting yesterday afternoon at 623 Louisiana avenue northwest.

"Atheists should have more respect for their teachings than deliberately to acknowledge God by their profanity," the speaker said. "There are so many other profane expressions that one can use without being 'blasphemous.'"

Young Woman Is Missing.

Police have been asked to search for Mrs. Lillie Marsh, 18 years old, who disappeared on January 16 from her home at 622 L street southeast. Her absence was reported by her husband, Ellis Marsh.

Zuta Linked With Sale Of Police Force Jobs

Chicago, Jan. 18 (A.P.).—The name of Jack Zuta, slain gang overlord, was linked today with a specific charge of jobbuying in the Chicago police department. Less specifically, proceedings in a contest over his will brought forth testimony by a former State representative that Zuta had planned for himself a career as a political "power."

Both developments were unexpected. The statements of a former sweetheart brought about the arrest of Police Sergt. Jack Herdegen. On her testimony he was charged with using $1,500 obtained from Zuta to buy his promotion. The woman, Miss Bernice Shaw, said, "Herdegen threw me over, so I decided to talk." She described the officer as a "collector" on the near North Side and indicated that he helped levy tribute for Zuta.

The will hearing had dealt largely with the question of whether Zuta was a resident of Chicago until former State Representative Harry W Starr took the stand.

"Zuta told me," he said, "that he was busy politically and that he was forming an organization to support Thompson," Starr said. "He said that he expected to be a power in politics and that he was going hook, line and sinker for Thompson, because Thompson would do the same for him."

Tom Mix to Face Circus Suit Today

101 Ranch Owner Demands $325,000 for Breach of Contract.

Erie, Pa., Jan. 18 (A.P.).—Rivalry of the Ringling and 101 Ranch circus shows will be transferred from tanbark to courtroom tomorrow, with the opening here of a trial of the $325,000 suit for breach of contract brought by Col. Zack Miller, owner of the 101 Ranch, against Tom Mix, cowboy of the circus and films.

Mix, now employed by John Ringling, came here with Ringling's legal advisers, who are to assist in fighting the suit. With Miller came the wife Mix recently divorced. She will testify against him.

The suit involves an oral promise Mix gave Miller to serve with him, a promise never carried out, for Mix went to the Selis-Floto Circus. Miller has said it was agreed Mix was to receive $10,000 a week from the circus for which he was once a rider at $35 weekly.

Chest With Name Jesus Stirs Protest

Attempt to Identify Bones as Nazarene's Hit by Historian.

Berlin, Jan. 18. (N.Y.W.N.S.).—Prof. Lietzmann noted theologian and church historian of Berlin University, in an article supplied to the Evangelical Press Agency Service, protests against the sensational attempt to make it appear that the bones of Jesus recently were found by Prof. Sudenik, of Jerusalem University.

Prof. Sudenik reported last week that he had found a small chest of bones with the inscription on the cover, "Jesus, Son of Joseph."

Prof Lietzmann declares that Joseph is still a name in common use among Jews and that Jesus was equally common until the rise of Christianity made it unacceptable to them. He says, "No honest researcher can cherish the thought of identifying the bones in this chest with those of Jesus of Nazareth."

ing taken care of. According to the Red Cross statement in the beginning, they did not have the funds to take care of the situation and at that time the Red Cross was not asking for additional funds.

Defines Senate Temper.

"Under those circumstances Congress had no alternative. No senator, I venaure to believe, wanted to supplant the Red Cross. No senator wants to vote money out of the Treasury for these purposes if there is any voluntary organization ready to do the work. On the other hand, few senators indeed would refuse to vote money to take care of the starving, care for the sick, in the absence of relief from other sources.

"The trouble with this situation is precisely the same as it was with reference to unemployment, and that was an effort to minimize its seriousness and to criticize those who urged its seriousness.

"Now, if there has been an awakening to the real situation and the Red Cross is prepared to take care of the situation, I, for one, shall be happy to know it, but let me say, had it not been for the agitation in Congress, thousands of men, women and children would have bitterly died of hunger and exposure."

Seed Loan Machinery Will Be Ready Today

(Associated Press.)

The larger part of the Government's machinery for loaning $45,000,000 for seed, feed and fertilizer in drought and storm areas embracing more than half the States of the Union will be ready to function today.

Dr. C. W. Warburton, secretary of the national drought relief committee, who will have direct charge, has received word that the field office at St. Louis will be opened today. The office at Memphis, Tenn., also will be opened. Offices at Washington and Grand Forks, N. Dak., were ready before.

Shipments of the printed voucher blanks upon which the approved loans will be paid have been dispatched to the field offices. By the latter part of the week, disbursing officers of the field offices will begin filling out vouchers on approved loans.

With the exception of the voucher forms, all other collateral papers, including promissory notes and crop mortgage papers, by which the loans will be secured, are in readiness.

Warburton said the department had no estimate as to the number of farmers who will receive aid.

Mrs. Crater, Wife Of Jurist, Returns

Whereabouts of Missing Husband Still Puzzle to Police.

New York, Jan. 18 (N.Y.W.N.S.).—Mrs. Joseph Force Crater, of whom the New York County grand jury said, "We have fruitlessly endeavored to induce her to appear before us and give testimony," returned to her apartment at 40 Fifth avenue today for the first time since August 6, when her husband, the Supreme Court justice, disappeared.

Meanwhile the whereabouts of Crater still is a mystery, although reports of his presence have reached police from every point in this country and Cuba.

His vanishing at the start of the political campaign and inception of the inquiry into court scandals caused much speculation.

Film Supply Firm Fire In Istanbul Kills 14

Istanbul, Turkey, Jan. 18 (A.P.).—Fourteen persons were killed in a fire today in a building containing commercial offices and a motion picture supply store. Ten girls were seriously injured.

Of the fourteen who lost their lives seven succumbed to burns, three were asphyxiated and four died in jumping out of windows. The building was in the Galata quarter.

Shorter Skirts Decreed in Paris

Moderate Changes Are Seen in Apparel for Evening Wear.

Paris, Jan. 18 (N.Y.W.N.S.).—Shorter skirts for evening wear have been decreed by Paris fashion houses. This is one of the secrets which the first "openings" will reveal next month, according to indiscreet persons behind the scenes.

Evening dresses won't be exactly short, but they will at least allow the wearer to dance without skirts being trodden upon either by the wearers or by others. Ankle length is to be favored.

Scotch plaids, woolens and jerseys are to be the favorites in day wear, chiefly in light shades of brown. Tailored suits will also be fashionable, especially in dark blue.

TALES OF SUFFERING REACH RED CROSS

Texas and Oklahoma Tell of Families Lacking Food and Clothes.

APPEAL MADE TO D. A. R.

(Associated Press.)

New stories of hunger and hardship were written yesterday into Red Cross records.

Reporting that the last seventeen days had doubled the number receiving drought relief, the organization disclosed that its $10,000,000 drive thus far had brought it $598,000.

An appeal to Daughters of the American Revolution to join in the campaign for funds went out late yesterday from Mrs. Lowell Fletcher Hobart, president general of the organization.

Meantime word came from Texas that 300 families were destitute in Red River County and 200 families in Wilbarger County. A letter from a mother of seven in Texas said the crop had failed and the children were ragged and without food.

An Oklahoma county reported food and clothing exhausted and 500 families to be cared for. The report said: "Destitute does not mean they are actually in need, but are on the verge of starvation and without sufficient clothing to prevent suffering. Should we have a severe blizzard such as we had in January last year, some would actually freeze to death if not cared for. Local people have done all they can to relieve the situation."

One worker reported finding a father and five children barefooted in the snow, but too proud to ask for help.

Memphis reported heavy demands within 100-mile radius, including nearby Mississippi. The report added: "Pleas for help come not only from the small farm owner, but from owners of large plantations who are unable longer to care for their tenants due to exhaustion of resources and lack of credit at the banks which were forced to curtail loans. Many, formerly able to tide over their tenants, are now forced to seek Red Cross help, increasing the number to be cared for by chapters."

Deaths Reach 114 In Mexican Quake

Town of 2,000 Obliterated; 275 Shocks Follow First Tremor.

Mexico City, Jan. 18 (A.P.).—Dr. Rueda, in charge of a relief unit working in the zone devastated by an earthquake Wednesday, reported tonight the town of Misuatlan had been totally destroyed and twenty or more persons killed.

His report brings the total recorded dead to 114 thus far. Workers are still taking bodies from ruins in the Oaxaca Valley, so the list may be increased.

The observatory at Oaxaca reported 275 earthshocks followed upon the first sharp tremor which wrought great destruction in the city. Misuatlan, the town reported obliterated, lay 42 miles south of Oaxaca and had 2,000 inhabitants.

Quake Predicted Before Wednesday

Hungarian Locates Great Convulsion in Pacific or in Japan.

Budapest, Hungary, Jan. 18 (A.P.). The world's next great earthquake, predicts Prof. Martin Hanko, will occur between tomorrow and Wednesday somewhere in the western half of the Pacific Ocean or in Japan.

Prof. Hanko, a member of the faculty at Pecs University in South Hungary, discussed his forecasting system with the Associated Press today.

"For many years," he said, "I have been studying earthquakes and have found there is a uniform and natural sequence to such convulsions. My system is based upon the simplest principles of prediction, applied with a highly elaborated scheme of mathematics. Since October I have fixed the dates of approximately eleven earthquakes, all of which developed."

Lobbyists Declare 1931 Is Crucial Year

Characterizing the discussion over responsibility for adequate relief for victims of unemployment as "the acid test of the adequacy of political government to meet the needs of an antisocial and selfish, mechanized efficiency," the People's Lobby, of which Prof. John Dewey is president, in a statement made public yesterday said:

"Nineteen thirty-one will probably determine whether our present form of political government can survive, or whether millions of Americans will embrace communism as the only way of escape from an economic-politico system which disregards the primary rights of producers."

Toscanini's Wife in Italy Hears Him by Rebroadcast

Special Wave Is Used for Concert; Radiophone Links Pair.

New York, Jan. 18 (A.P.).—Arturo Toscanini and the Philharmonic Symphony Orchestra gave a concert in Carnegie Hall today for millions of persons, but especially for Mrs. Arturo Toscanini, in Milan, Italy.

Ever since his American concerts have been broadcast the famous Italian conductor has been eager that his wife in Milan might hear them. Two days ago he asked the Columbia Broadcasting System to make an especial effort so that she might pick up the music on her short wave set.

The program today was rebroadcast by short wave from Schenectady and was heard in Milan by Mrs. Toscanini, "just as clearly as though I were there in the concert hall."

At the conclusion of the playing of "Death and Transfiguration," the final number on the program today, the maestro stepped to the microphone and, in Italian, said to his wife:

"I send you my best greetings. I will sail in two days and I will see you and embrace you."

Just at that moment a transatlantic telephone connection between New York and Milan was completed, and the conductor, off stage, spoke for two minutes to his wife and heard her voice.

The audience in Carnegie Hall, learning by word of mouth the personal drama of the occasion, refused to leave the auditorium and the applause and bravos resounded for many minutes.

HOOVER LAW GROUP MAY REPORT TODAY

Wickersham Commission to Transmit Document to President at Once.

(Associated Press.)

Unless delayed by circumstances now unforeseen, the law enforcement commission plans to transmit its lengthy prohibition report to President Hoover today or, at least, tomorrow.

This was the forecast yesterday from sources close to the commission. Indication was given that the unannounced causes for withholding the document—whether for printing or for the receipt of the final written opinion from one of the members—had been overcome, and that there should be little further delay.

The report will go to the White House without further consideration by the commission as a whole. The majority statement of the members—described as largely factual, but containing several recommendations for improving the present prohibition situation—has been virtually complete for some time. The writing of at least one lengthy individual opinion, or report, however, was completed only during the middle of last week.

A meeting of the full commission for a final consideration of its completed work was scheduled for last Wednesday, following a week's recess, but this was postponed when only a few of the eleven members arrived in the Capital. Meetings only a few minutes long have been held for the past several days, adjourning each time for lack of a quorum.

Two of the members are in the Middle West, two more in the South, one has gone to the West Coast and another is in Europe, while a seventh, Miss Ada Comstock, president of Radcliffe College, has been ill at her home in Cambridge, Mass.; yesterday only one other member, besides Chairman Wickersham, was in Washington.

If expectations at commission headquarters are fulfilled, the report will be given to the press within a comparatively short time after it arrives at the White House, to be held in confidence until it is submitted by the President to Congress. Some estimates have placed the time of its release to the public as early as tomorrow or Wednesday.

This would give Mr. Hoover very little time to study it, however, particularly if he does more than write a brief message of transmittal to Congress.

British Aviatrix Halted Again on Peiping Flight

Warsaw, Jan. 18 (A.P.).—Miss Amy Johnson, British aviatrix, who cracked up her plane near here recently on an attempted flight from England to Peiping, China, took off today for Berlin, but was forced down by motor trouble near Klodawa, halfway between Warsaw and Posen.

She made a safe landing, however, and expected to continue her flight to Berlin tomorrow. She expressed the opinion that the trouble was caused by the impurity of the gasoline. A mechanic was sent from here to assist her.

EFFORT TO RESTORE TRADE SHOWS GAINS

Optimism Increasing in U. S., Canada and in Parts of Latin America.

FOOD PRICES ARE LOWER

Efforts on the part of the Federal Government, States and private interests to bring about improvement in business conditions and reduce unemployment are showing signs of progress in some communities. Optimism is increasing in parts of the United States, Canada and some of the Latin-American nations.

Government officials and captains of industry agree that the first step toward recovery in Europe is the resumption of normal buying in the United States.

Reports from the South indicate better conditions in the textile industry. The price of cotton, middling, at New York, and iron and steel prices are holding their own. Brighter prospects in Argentina, Canada and a few other countries have helped the situation in the United States.

Outlook Seems Better.

A report issued by the Department of Commerce yesterday says that the general outlook in Argentina is "slightly more optimistic" than it was a week prior to the last official information from there, and "the general tone of trade" in Canada is more "optimistic."

"Weekly business indicators available to the Department of Commerce for the week ended January 10, "a Government statement says, "show that increases occurred over the preceding week in the volume of bank debits outside New York City, the average prices paid for representative stocks and bonds, and the Federal reserve reatio. Declines from the previous period were noted in cotton receipts at principal markets, loan and discounts of Federal Reserve member banks and interest rates on call money.

"Time money rates registered no change. The number of business failures rose during the week.

"Wholesale prices in general, as measured by the weekly index of 120 principal commodities, were fractionally off from a week ago. As contrasted with wholesale prices of a year ago, decline occurred without exception.

Bank Loans Smaller.

"Bank loans and discounts of member banks were smaller and the Federal Reserve ratio higher for the period ended January 10, when compared with the corresponding week in 1930."

Wholesale and retail prices of food are still decreasing to the consumer, according to figures compiled by the Bureau of Labor Statistics. Butter, for instance, dropped from 53.5 cents a pound November 15, 1929, to 45.4 cents November 15, 1930.

The cost of various articles of food combined shows a decrease of 11.4 per cent November 15, 1930, as compared with November 15, 1929, and a decrease of 2.0 per cent November 15, 1930, as compared with October 15, 1930.

HOUSE PLANS DRIVE UPON SUPPLY BILLS

Leaders Would Sidetrack All Other Measures to Avert Jam.

SPEED ACTS TO SENATE

(Associated Press.)

An intensive drive to dispose of all annual supply bills by early February to avoid an excuse for a special session has been instituted by House Republican leaders.

All other major legislation has been sidetracked. The administration's $74,000,000 naval construction program, the Wickersham proposal to tighten the padlocking proceedings and the Capper-Kelly retail price bill have been shoved aside, at least temporarily.

With little more than six weeks remaining, none of the regular appropriation bills have become law. Although the House has approved six, the Senate has acted on but the billion-dollar Treasury-Postoffice bill, and it is in dispute between the two branches over an employes' salary raising provision.

Speed Remaining Measures.

Confronted by this situation, Speaker Longworth and other leaders are striving to send the remaining measures to the Senate soon, in order that it may not contend that insufficient time for consideration was allowed. Should the bills fail of final passage by March 4, departments affected would be unable to operate after next July 1, unless President Hoover convened Congress in special session.

Should the legislative jam in the Senate block consideration of the measures until the last days of the session, a small group could force an extra assembly through a filibuster.

Although miscellaneous legislation will be considered in the House today, it will resume work tomorrow on the appropriation bill for the Justice, State, Commerce and Labor Departments. Wet forces have planned a concerted action against allotments for 500 more prohibition agents next year, purchasing of alcoholic evidence and undercover agents. This contest is expected to delay the program which calls for taking up of the billion dollar independent offices supply bill Thursday.

Shoals Failure Seen.

Hope for settlement of the Muscle Shoals controversy over the Senate's Government operation proposal has diminished in the House. However, a Democratic move is under way to have the House conference committee discharged. Little success is expected at this time unless Republicans are assured that the President would decline to approve the Norris plan. In that event the Government operation proposal might be disposed of in Congress, to be vetoed by the President.

After the supply bills have been passed the Capper-Kelly resale price bill will have its innings. It has been pending for nearly a decade. Strong opposition to it has developed on both sides of the House during recent weeks. Efforts to send it back to the House interstate commerce committee are to be made by its opponents.

The measure would prohibit retail sale of trade-mark articles below the price fixed by the manufacturer.

Book on Old Rome Given Pope, King

Mussolini Also Gets Copy of Work Begun by Late American Savant.

Rome, Jan. 18 (N.Y.W.N.S.).—Dr. Thomas Ashby, famous English archeologist, regarded as the greatest living authority on ancient Rome and the countryside surrounding it, has just presented to King Victor Emmanuel of Italy, to Pope Pius XI and to Prime Minister Benito Mussolini copies of the "Typographical Dictionary of Ancient Rome," which the late Prof. Samuel Ball Platner, of Western Reserve University, Cleveland, had almost completed before his death.

Mrs. Platner, widow of the Cleveland savant, asked Prof. Ashby to finish the work started by her husband and helped in the undertaking. It was at her request that copies of the finished book were presented to the king, the Pope and Il Duce.

CHEST SPECIAL UNIT WILL REPORT TODAY

Group Seeking $1,000,000 of Entire Total to Gather at Willard Hotel.

DRIVE AIMS OUTLINED

The Special Gifts unit of the Community Chest, which has in charge raising $1,000,000 of the $1,930,154.40 sought, will hold its first report meeting at 1 o'clock this afternoon at the Willard Hotel. This unit seeks only gifts of $500, and will end next Monday, when the regular solicitation of the Chest will begin.

For the benefit of new residents of Washington who may not yet know of the work of the Community Chest, Edward F. Colladay, chairman of the campaign committee, last night outlined its policy and aims.

"The economy of the Community Chest," he said, "has already been demonstrated—6 or 7 per cent against 15 to 20 per cent. This means that 93 or 94 cents out of every dollar raised can go into service under the Community Chest plan as against 80 to 85 per cent under the old unplanned method of competitive solicitation.

"Through a very competent budget committee, the Community Chest works continually for the improvement of methods of its member organizations. Recommendations for improvement have in part resulted from surveys which the Community Chest has financed through the Council of Social Agencies, including in the past year the great survey of health and social agencies and hospitals carried on by the American Public Health Association."

Nevada Asks Hospital For Workers on Dam

(Associated Press.)

Nevada wants a hospital for the veterans who are expected to flock to that State to help build Hoover Dam.

George Malone, State engineer, was in Washington yesterday, and announced he would go before the House veterans subcommittee next Friday to urge establishment of a Federal hospital. He called attention to the clause in the contract for Hoover Dam and the Boulder Canyon project power plant that says contractors must give preference to veterans or American citizens for the jobs.

Corporation Head Ends Life by Rope

C. H. L. Flinterman Served as War Industries Board Division Chief.

Jackson, Mich., Jan. 18 (A.P.).—The body of Carl H. L. Flinterman, president of the Wilcox-Rich Corporation, was found hanging from a steam pipe in a room of the Hayes Hotel here at 7:30 o'clock this morning. Dr. Jason B. Meads, coroner of Jackson County, said Flinterman committed suicide.

Flinterman, who was 54 years old, was chairman of the pressed steel division of the War Industries Board. His home was in Birmingham, Detroit suburb. He registered at the hotel Saturday evening, asking to be called at 7 a. m. today. The night clerk and porter broke into the room after Flinterman failed to answer the telephone. Towels had been stuffed into the crack under the door to deaden sound.

Relatives were unable to advance any reason for the act. They said Flinterman apparently was in good health and had no financial worries.

Theft Held Motive As Athlete Is Slain

Riverton, N. J., Jan. 18 (N.Y.W.N.S.).—Slugged, chloroformed and then left to be poisoned by the carbon monoxide gas escaping from his own automobile, Harry Burns, 23, former high school athlete, was found in a dying condition early today in the garage at the rear of his home.

Burns, who was more than 6 feet tall, died two hours later at West Jersey Hospital, Camden. His watch and money were missing and authorities announced their conviction that robbery constituted the sole motive for the crime.

There were lacerations on his head and his clothing was ripped and torn to shreds. Because of his strength, as well as the evidence of the melee in the garage, investigators held to the theory that two or more men were required to overpower him. They said that after hammering him to the floor his attackers turned on the engine to make certain he would be killed by the fumes.

SLAYER SEALS LIPS WITH 'NO REGRETS'

Port Arthur, Tex., Police See Father's Vengeance in Killing of Man.

DAUGHTER SHOT DEC. 28

Port Arthur, Tex., Jan. 18 (A.P.).—Maintaining steadfastly he had "done nothing to regret" A. B. Johnson, oil refinery foreman, kept close silence today while police could offer only their theory that a father's idea of retribution prompted the fatal shooting last night of Ottis Lee Adams, 22. Johnson was at liberty under $10,000 bond today, charged with the murder.

Johnson resolutely refused to say why he slew the youth, an occasional companion of Johnson's 16-year-old daughter, Elizabeth, who died of a mysterious bullet wound less than a month ago.

Miss Johnson was found shot to death December 28 in an automobile in front of the First Methodist Church South, here. Robert L. Williams, sophomore at the University of Texas and son of the Rev. H. W. Williams, presiding elder of the Austin district of the Methodist church, told investigators he had taken her to the church, hoping the pastor would be able to effect a reconciliation in a lovers' quarrel between them. He said he found the girl dead when he returned to the machine. He was charged with murder but released when a grand jury refused to return an indictment.

Police Chief M. B. Word today gave his explanation of the shooting. "Adams had been going with Miss Johnson, as had Williams, although Williams had been away at school.

"When Williams learned she had been going with Adams—a married man—he objected. I am not going to speculate as to the motive Mr. Johnson had. He is widely respected and well liked here."

Mr. and Mrs. Lee Adams, parents of the slain man, started late today for De Quincy, La., their home, with his body.

"All of these rumors about my son can't be true," the mother sobbed. "I wish he could have died a natural death at home. He can't tell his side of it. He's gone."

Adams' estranged wife, with whom he had planned to attempt reconciliation today at Vinton, La., was too ill to come here, officials learned. It was thought she might be able to assist in clearing up the case.

British Rail Men To Fight Pay Cut

Strong Action Threatened Against Proposals; 250,000 Weavers Out.

London, Jan. 18 (A.P.).—Joy over settlement of the South Wales coal strike was mixed with gloom tonight over a shutdown in the cotton industry, affecting 250,000 weavers.

Meanwhile an anxious period in a third great British industry begins tomorrow with the meeting of the national wage board to discuss proposed reductions in the pay of railway employes. C. T. Cramp, general secretary of the National Union of Railway Men, in a speech at Bedford, tonight said the whole future of British railways was at stake. "It may be we shall have to take a very strong line of action," he said.

The chief proposals of the employers are reduction of adult railway men's wages of 6 shillings weekly, and a weekly minimum of 38 shillings instead of the present 40, with other reductions for juniors and in other special cases.

MOB RUMOR FALSE; TOWN DROPS ARMS

Maryville, Mo., Is Calm After Night of Terror Awaiting Attack.

MILITARY IS SENT HOME

Maryville, Mo., Jan. 18 (A.P.).—A Sabbath calm today prevailed in Maryville, little northwest Missouri College town, where an armed citizenry last night patrolled the streets in answer to an unverified rumor that a group of Negroes intended vengeance for the lynching of one of their race.

At the request of Mayor W. C. Garrett, Gov. Henry S. Caulfield also called out the local company of the National Guard. The guard was demobilized at 5 a. m. today, when no raiders appeared.

The anxious moments of last night still were the prime topic of conversation on street corners and in homes today. A feeling of relief, however, had superseded the grim attitude of preparedness manifest a few hours earlier.

The rumors that resulted in the men of the section seizing firearms and in some cases corn knives and hurrying to downtown Maryville, started with the receipt of a telephone call by Mrs. L. L. Edwards. She said an "Alice Ward," of St. Joseph, Mo., had informed her of a rumor that several automobile loads of Negroes had departed for Maryville from St. Joseph and Kansas City.

It was feared by the citizenry that the reported raid was being made as an act of vengeance for the lynching, January 12, of Raymond Gunn, who had confessed attacking and slaying Velma Colter, 19-year-old school teacher. Gunn was taken from the custody of Sheriff Harve England as that officer was escorting the prisoner to the courthouse for trial. He was shackled to the roof of the little country schoolhouse where Miss Colter taught and the scene of the alleged attack. The building then was soaked with gasoline and the Negro burned to death atop the flaming pyre.

St. Joseph, Mo., Jan. 18 (A.P.).—Miss Alice Ward, who identified herself as a saleswoman, tonight said she had telephoned Mrs. L. L. Edwards at Maryville, Mo., saying she had heard a group of Negroes were planning to raid the city.

The report of the contemplated raid, she said, had been overheard here as a rumor.

Former Greek King Denies Coup Plan.

Bucharest, Jan. 18 (A.P.).—Former King George of Greece tonight answered rumors that he was seeking to claim his throne, saying the situation at present is unfavorable for any such declarations on his part.

When Stick Pusher Herds Over Hump, It's Plane Talk

Puzzling "Slanguage" of Air Pilots Embraces "Banana Peelings," as Well as "Pants," "Shingles" and "Old Ladies' Home," But All Is Explained.

Los Angeles, Jan. 18 (A.P.).—The stick-pusher herded his "tin Lizzie" over the hump, where he hit zero-zero and had to stand her on her ear, taking it in the face while he horsed down to count the insulators. With his flippers flopped and the coffee mills straight under, he laid it on the railroad, gave her the gun and headed for the old ladies' home.

This is the mystifying phraseology of this modern day in the air transportation service. The lingo of the pilot is rolled off the tongue of Si Morehouse, chief pilot of Transcontinental-Western Air Express Lines, for the education of newcomers to the company's air mail and passenger service.

Translated into ordinary language, the account says:

The pilot flew his trimotored Ford plane across country, hitting low visibility and being forced to bank sharply, looking through the opened cockpit window while he nosed down above a line of railway telegraph poles. With the ailerons tilted and the motors headed down, he skimmed low above the railroad tracks to guide him, opened the feed throttle wide and headed for the home airport.

The lingo is explained as follows:

A "stick pusher," or pilot, "herds" or flies his plane from point to point.

"Zero-zero"—No or low visibility.

"Horsing down"—Nosing toward earth.

"Counting the insulators"—Being low enough to see telegraph poles.

"Lay it on the railroad"—Fly low, following the tracks.

"Give her the gun"—Open the feed throttle.

"The old ladies' home"—The home airport.

"A milk route"—Short feeder airline, disdained by flying aces.

"The iron compass"—Railroad tracks followed as a guide in storms.

"Windmill"—Propeller.

"Big Berths"—Thirty-passenger Fokker plane; a 12-passenger is a "gelophy."

"A duck"—An amphibian plane.

"Shingles"—Wing covering; that on a Ford plane is "the washboard."

"Banana peelings"—Cowling between the cylinders.

A cylinder is a "can," or a "barrel."

"Pants"—Streamlined coverings over the wheels.

Occasionally an airport gets a radio "jugful"—A coded order to "Please hold westbound until cleared by dispatcher."

Flood in Mississippi Valley This Spring Held Unlikely

Long, Dry Spell Eliminates Danger, Sapping Flow of Streams and Leaving Earth Extremely Porous; Engineering Work Making Fine Progress.

(Associated Press.)

The long dry spell with which the country was afflicted last summer left at least one note of cheer in the Mississippi Valley—there is little danger of a flood this spring.

In addition to sapping the flow of the streams, it left the earth a porous sponge, capable of absorbing millions of tons of water.

The low levels of the river gave engineers an opportunity to push forward their work of building and strengthening the levees that go toward the new flood control system for the Father of Waters.

Army engineers yesterday reported the Mississippi at an extremely low stage and possibilities of a flood during the spring months practically nil.

Col. Ernest Graves, a member of the Mississippi River Commission, said that already about 60 per cent of the area affected by the flood control project is reasonably safe from flood danger.

The principal work extends from Cape Girardeau, Mo., to the gulf. The plans provide for raising and strengthening levees along the Mississippi, except at the heads of the Boeuf and Atchafalaya Basins; protecting levees planned in the side lowlands; reducing the height of river side levees near Birds Point and construction of a set-back levee from Birds Point to New Madrid, Mo., and a masonry-controlled spillway at Bonnet Carre, about 20 miles above New Orleans, for its protection.

From September 1, 1929, to September 1, 1930, a total of 53,000,000 cubic yards of earth had been placed in the levees.

The total project requires moving about 500,000,000 cubic yards of earth, or "over twice as much as that excavated from the Panama Canal."

Approximately $100,000,000 had been spent by the Government on flood control work up to October 30, 1930, since congressional enactment of the flood control act in 1928.

The Government's work on the Bonnet Carre Spillway is expected to be completed late this year.

Local and Government interests have failed to reach agreement over property lying within the spillway and courts now are attempting to settle the matter.

American People Make Diet More Diversified

(Associated Press.)

The dietary habits of the American people are changing.

R. W. Dunlap, Assistant Secretary of Agriculture, has found that since the World War there has been a trend toward a more diversified diet, with a preference for more vegetables, fruit, sugar and dairy products. Consumption of bread, corn meal and other cereals has declined.

Since 1915 there has been an increase of 36 per cent in the per capita consumption of vegetables. Also, the average American now eats about a third more sugar than before, about a fourth more milk and dairy products, a fifth more vegetables, and until very recent years a little more meat.

In the last five years there has been a decrease of 30 per cent in the consumption of grains for human food to an average per capita consumption of 240 pounds annually.

In the meats there has been a gain of 15 per cent in the consumption of pork and lard to an average of 84 pounds per person, but a decline in the use of beef and veal from 70 pounds in 1918 to 58 pounds per year in 1929.

FRENCH MOB RIOTS OVER WHEAT PRICE

Screen Is Torn as Movie House Shows Picture of Premier Steeg.

SEE HIGHER LIVING COST

Paris, Jan. 18 (A.P.).—The government's proposed increase in the price of wheat caused a riot of protest in a motion picture house today, when the picture of Premier Steeg was flashed on the screen.

Several persons in the audience rushed to the stage and tore down the canvas. An uproar followed and continued so long that the manager had to refund to all patrons the admission price. He temporarily closed the house, which is on the Boulevard des Italiens.

Police arrested two of the disturbers, who said the protest was against an increase in the cost of living which, they said, would follow a rise in the price of wheat.

The proposal of Victor Boret, minister of agriculture, to raise the price of wheat from $1.50 a bushel to approximately $2 has caused a sharp difference of opinion with Leon Meyer, undersecretary of state for commerce.

A special council of the ministers to be presided over by President Doumergue, has been called to meet at the Elysee Palace tomorrow morning. M. Meyer has been especially invited to discuss the proposals with the council. He has strenuously opposed the measure, even threatening to resign if it is adopted.

The chamber is about evenly divided on the question. Deputies from the rural districts favor Boret's idea, as a protection to the farmers, while members representing cities and seaports oppose the plan, contending an increase in the price of wheat will raise the cost of living in general.

American-Born Countess Is Dead

Descendant of Old German Noble Family Admitted Forgery in 1926.

Potsdam, Germany, Jan. 18 (A.P.).—Countess Hessolde Schnable, who was born in St. Louis in 1885, died today at a hospital after illness of a year.

She was the widow of Prof. Schnabel, an eminent toxicologist, but was the daughter of Count Hasso von Lutningen-Westerburg, scion of one of the oldest families in Germany, who emigrated to America in the early 80s, marrying Margarete Meyer, of St. Louis, in October, 1884.

In 1926 the countess was the cause of a Potsdam society scandal, which caused considerable notoriety when she admitted forging a will to obtain the estate of her husband and was sentenced to three months in jail.

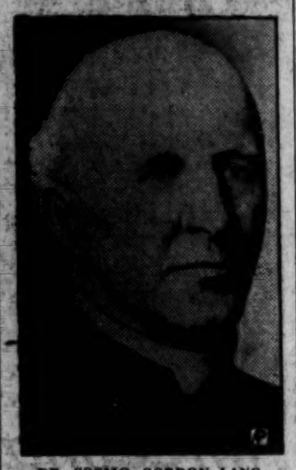
Archbishop of Canterbury Must Rest Three Months

Severe Neuralgia of Face Attributed by Doctors to Overwork.



DR. COSMO GORDON LANG.

London, Jan. 18 (A.P.).—The Archbishop of Canterbury was ordered today to take a rest of at least three months by his physicians. An official statement issued from the archbishop's residence, Lambeth Palace, and signed by his doctors read as follows:

"The Archbishop of Canterbury is suffering from a severe neuralgia of the fifth nerve. The fundamental cause of this, in the archbishop's case, is overwork. In order to recover health it will be necessary for the archbishop to take a complete rest for at least three months.

"It is to be recalled that a year or more ago the archbishop was ill from a duodenal ulcer. From this he made a complete recovery and carried through the responsible duties incidental to the Lambeth conference without difficulty, and until last month his health was excellent.

The Most Rev. Cosmo Gordon Lang became Archbishop of Canterbury in 1928. He is 68 years old.

Neuralgia of the fifth nerve is a common complaint. This nerve begins at the gasserian ganglion at the base of the brain and covers all the sensory nerves of the face.

Neuralgia may occur at any part of the nerve and has a particularly profound affect if it attacks the gasserian ganglion.

were made to police headquarters by a patrolman at 2:30 p. m. Shortly afterward the news was broadcast by radio.

Meanwhile, tourists from all parts of the world were photographing the cataract, unaware that its luring beauty had undergone a natural metamorphosis—a change that always is taking place although not to such a great extent. The average erosion of the American falls is estimated at one inch a year.

New York, Jan. 18 (A.P.).—The crash in Niagara Falls today occurred about three-fourths the distance from the American shore to Goat Island, which divides the Canadian and American sections.

The Canadian Horseshoe Fall, 155 feet high with a curving crest line of about 2,600 feet, had been cutting back 2.3 feet a year since 1906, after more than a century at a greater rate.

Prior to the crash the American Fall, 165 feet high and 1,400 broad, had shown negligible change in appearance for centuries.

Luna Island, near which the crash occurred, is a small island about a hundred square feet. A narrow bridge of 150 feet connects it with Goat Island, passing over the thin stream known as "The Bridal Veil."

Geologists have ascertained that the falls and river are 35,000 years old, and during that time the changes in the entire line of the falls have been few and slight. The water has always remained clear, its grandeur drawing 2,000,000 or more people annually.

Parks on both the American and Ontario shores are owned by the governments.

COLONIAL LANDMARK THREATENED BY FIRE

Thousands Witness Blaze in Structure Where Lafayette Once Lived.

planned to tear it down, to make way for a real estate subdivision.

The building, recently known in Washington as "the retreat house," was once the home of officers of the Colonial Army, and Marquise de Lafayette lived there as the guest of American officers for several months. During his sojourn there, according to legend, he was visited on a number of occasions by Gen. Washington, and the sight of the two officers walking together through the grounds was a familiar one.

About 1890 Col. George Truesdale planned to tear the old structure down and build a large horseshoe-shaped hotel on the site, but the plans were dropped.

Was Girls' Seminary.

Then for many years the building was occupied as a seminary for girls, who came from all parts of the country to attend the exclusive institution, called "Washington College."

When the World War broke out, and this country entered it, another change came. The owners of Washington College turned it over to the Chesapeake & Potomac Telephone Co. as a dormitory for the numerous young women employed during those troubious times.

It was during its last period of active service as a place of habitation that the old building became the "Retreat House."

In 1921 the Very Rev. Paschasius Heriz, of the Order of Barefoot Carmelites, bought the property and converted it into a national house of retreat for women.

Carmelites Had Property.

Prominent women from various parts of the archdiocese frequently made week-end retreats to the house, living the lives of the cloistered nuns during the period.

In 1923 the Carmelite Fathers established the Shrine of the Little Flower in the house dedicated to the honor of St. Teresa, a Carmelite nun.

The retreats conducted there were frequently directed by some of the foremost preachers of the diocese.

Three years ago the Carmelite Fathers sold the property, in order to devote their efforts exclusively to the work associated with the monastery at 150 Rhode Island avenue northeast.

DE BOE GIRL TO BARE ADDITIONAL SECRETS

charges her ex-secretary with buying out of her own checking account.

The flaming haired actress said she was angry because her faith in people was gone. "That's why I wept on the stand."

"I shall never trust any one again," she said bitterly.

"And then she sits up there on the stand and sneers at me. I used to think she had a sweet face, but now she looks so hard."

Miss Bow had more to say about Daisy's assertion that the famous hair was hennaed.

"My hair has always been red. At times, for different pictures, I've had it dyed. Once black, another time I was a blonde, just like Daisy. Anybody seeing her in court can tell hers has been bleached.

"The thing I hate worst of all is having to pass up that picture 'City Streets.' I'm broken hearted over that because it was a big dramatic part, not the sort of thing I have been doing at all."

Miss Bow will be called as a rebuttal witness, David Clark, prosecutor, said, and be given a chance to refute the story told by Miss De Boe.

"And I have other witnesses, also," he said, "who will testify that the De Boe girl's testimony is largely self-serving."

Nathan Freedman, defense counsel, expects to have Miss De Boe on the stand throughout tomorrow morning's two-hour session. Unless cross-examination is unexpectedly lengthy, he said she probably would finish in that time. Six or seven other defense witnesses will follow.

Miss Bow, who has expressed a desire to attend court to hear Daisy "tell all," will not be present tomorrow. Studio officials late today said she would be unable to appear. She is expected to be able, however, to testify when called in rebuttal later in the week.

UNCONSCIOUS GIRL FOUND; 2 ARE HELD

Young Married Woman and Sister Charge They Were Mistreated.

AUTO RIDE IS DESCRIBED

Special to The Washington Post.

Annapolis, Md., Jan. 18.—Two men were held for further hearing here today, after Mrs. Jessie Dice, 17, was found unconscious in the middle of Second street, Eastport, late last night. The woman, who is married to a hospital corpsman attached to the General Naval Hospital here, and her sister, Clare Lewis, 18, single, are alleged to have gone for a ride with the men.

The men, Milton Hardesty and Gilbert Norfolk, both in their early twenties, were released under $500 bail, furnished by Buck Ford, Lothian, Anne Arundel County, where both young men live. Hardesty and Norfolk were arrested today by Sheriff R. Glenn Prout, who charged them with knowledge of the plight of the girls. When arraigned before Police Justice Louis M. Hopkins the men waived a hearing.

Police report that Mrs. Dice was found in the middle of the street, with her clothing very nearly torn from her body and several teeth broken. She was brought to the Emergency Hospital here for treatment.

Mrs. Dice and her sister claim, according to police, that they were seriously mistreated by the men, who, they alleged, threw them from the car in front of Eastport School. The unmarried sister is said to have found her way to the home of a relative in a delirious condition. The girls' father is Harry Lewis, of Severn avenue, painter at the Naval Academy.

According to Sheriff Prout, the men tell an entirely different story. They allege that the girls went for a ride voluntarily and that one of the two consumed considerable liquor. When the time came to go home the girls asked to be "let out" near their home. Hardesty and Norfolk told Sheriff Prout. They added that the one sister promised to look after the other, who, they said, had imbibed too freely. All knowledge of the fact that one girl was found with her clothing badly torn was denied by the men.

Bad-Check Writer Collected $75,000

Dencheff, Slain When He Resisted Arrest, Had Long Career.

New York, Jan. 18 (A.P.).—Stephen Dencheff, alias James Lodi, and about 25 other names, collected about $75,000 from sixteen banks through forged checks before a bullet ended his career in a Broadway office building, Charles A. Goodspeed, investigator for the banks, said today.

Dencheff was shot resisting two private detectives assigned to arrest him after he had been led into a trap in the office of Louis B. Wolfe, a steamship agent, whom Dencheff met previously while buying a ticket to Germany to escape arrest. Wolfe and his wife and daughter were charmed by the imposing looking Dencheff and awed by his "power in the motion picture world."

Thirty-two indictments had been returned against Dencheff and fifteen more were being drawn up.

Body of Teacher Believed in Ditch

Convinced the girl's body would be found in Bijou Irrigation Ditch, several men dug holes in ice covering the water, and found a suit of pajamas, identified as the girl's, in the ditch. Other personal effects of the teacher had been found nearby previously.

Authorities promised an important announcement in the case tomorrow. Other new evidence, with a bearing on the case, also has been unearthed, it was said.

GRAPE JUICE FIRM'S HEADS FACE ARREST

U. S. Attorney Plans Issue of Warrants Today in Kansas City.

"SILLY," SAYS MANAGER

Kansas City, Jan. 18 (A.P.).—Alleging conspiracy to violate the prohibition law, William A. Vandeventer, United States district attorney, today said warrants probably would be issued tomorrow for officials of the Ukiah Grape Products, Inc., retailer of unfermented fruit juices.

Twenty-three employes of the concern were arrested yesterday in a raid by Federal prohibition agents. Those taken into custody were attending a sales conference of Kansas City employes.

All of those arrested except A. E. Brunett, local manager of the company, were released by Federal prohibition officers. Those freed were released on their own recognizance to appear before a United States commissioner of called.

No formal charges have been lodged against Mr. Brunett, but H. L. Duncan, special agent in charge of the raid, said he would be arraigned tomorrow on a warrant charging conspiracy to violate the Federal prohibition law. Mr. Brunett's only comment was that the charge was "silly."

Mr. Duncan said salesmen explained verbally to customers how to cause the grape juice to become wine. Such instructions, either verbal or written, constitute a violation of the prohibition laws, Mr. Vandeventer said.

Federal agents said the company had ben operating in Kansas City since October 6, 1930.

All responsibility for the raid was taken by Mr. Duncan He declared he had received no instructions from prohibition department officials in Washington.

Bibles to Aid Sick, If Sober, Offered

Proposal in 16th Century Is Revealed by Early Lottery Ticket.

Baltimore, Jan. 18 (N.Y.W.N.S.).—An antiquated lottery ticket which led to discovery of the offer of an early governor to provide Bibles to heal Maryland's sick, if they would stay sober while reading them, has come to light here.

According to Dr. Martin J. Hanna, of the University of Maryland, the early royal governor, Francis Nicholson (1694-1698), shared in the popular belief of his day that reading the Scriptures was a good remedy for ill health, but he lacked equal faith in a still more popular remedy of the period, spiritus frumenti.

Dr. Hanna, owner of the ticket, after he had explained its part in early Maryland medical history to the Osler Historical Club last night, said it was believed to have been one issued in a lottery to raise funds for the building of the University Hospital. It was dated 1812.

Gamblers Banned at Miami As Blue Law Battle Rages

Millionaires Line Up on One Side, With Demand for Closed Town, While Business and Tradesmen Urge Liberality; Night Life Continues.

Miami Beach, Fla., Jan. 18. (A.P.).—A "keep out" sign for gamblers firmly tacked over the municipal doorway, resident of this winter playground today awaited developments in the drive of the socially and financially exclusive committee of 100 to rid the resort of statute violators.

The campaign took the form of a contest, with the socially elect on one side, business and tradesmen on the other, and the municipal council in the guise of a referee striving to please both parties.

Gamblers and bookmakers watched curiously along the sidelines with residents of the resort.

The millionaires, generaled by Joseph H. Adams and Clayton Sedgewick Cooper, and representing members of the committee of 100, inaugurated the campaign with a demand for a tightly lidded town during the winter months. The penalty for failure, Adams said, would be withdrawals of investments by himself and other wealthy land and estate owners. Adams holds city property valued at $2,000,000, he said.

The business and trades men took up the gantlet in favor of an open town, as they reviewed prospects of a slim winter season in event the place went "blue law."

Mayor Val C. Cleary hewed firmly to the line of law enforcement in a public statement to the delegation of millionaires. Later, however, with the plea of the business and tradesmen for a retraction, the mayor said the council would adopt a "liberal policy" in regard to entertainment features.

"I am no long-haired reformer," he said.

Dr. Richard Mead, president of the city council, said there would be no "blue laws" passed, but he and his conferees would enforce the law.

A sidelight of the situation was the arrest last night of eight men on vagrancy charges. Among them were well-known local characters.

Another sidelight was the issuance of a temporary injunction by Federal Judge W. B. Sheppard, closing the Picnic Two Bits Club, night club in Miami, pending hearing on a padlock order.

In the meantime reports were that local night clubs, in many of which gambling casinos are said to be operated, entertained the usual number of patrons last night. One or two clubs that are said to have gambling as their sole entertainment feature also were reported to have operated.

Were On Visit to Mother.

The two brothers and their wives were on a trip to visit their mother, Mrs. Luther Gaw, in Charlottesville. Bruce Gaw said that he was traveling a good distance behind his brother's car, having stopped to correct a minor engine defect. Upon reaching a curve on a downgrade, he saw his brother's car capsized on an embankment, he said. The accident had apparently occurred when an effort was made to round the curve, Mr. Gaw said.

Aided by colored men passing along the road, Mr. Gaw extricated the bodies of his brother and sister-in-law from the capsized car and took them to a physician in Gordonsville. They were then taken to the University Hospital at Charlottesville.

Mrs. Gaw never regained consciousness, having sustained multiple fractures. She died at 4:50 o'clock yesterday morning. Mr. Gaw suffered a fracture of the skull, a severe scalp wound and a compound fracture of the right arm. He has a fighting chance to recover, physicians at the Charlottesville hospital reported.

Mrs. Gaw is survived by her mother, Mrs. Willie Lynn, of 1327 Tenth street northwest. Mr. Gaw and his brother are employed by the Howard Cleaning Co.

Accident Held Unavoidable.

Acting Coroner Alpon Y. Bennett, after hearing testimony, declared that the accident in which Baker was killed was unavoidable, and Sherman was released. Sherman said he was driving south on the turnpike, about one-half mile south of Frederick, when he knocked the man down.

Glaring headlights of cars approaching in the opposite direction prevented him from seeing Mr. Baker, who was walking alongside of the road on his way home from a visit to relatives in Frederick. Sherman placed the man in his automobile and took him to the Frederick City Hospital, where he was announced dead.

Mr. Baker is survived by his wife and four sons.

Jennie Smith, 29 years old, was yesterday treated at Providence Hospital for bruises received when she was struck by an automobile driven by John Donnely, of Falls Church, Va., at the intersection of Pennsylvania avenue and First street southeast.

Held as Reckless Driver.

Donnely was arrested and charged with reckless driving at the Sixth Precinct Police Station. Jennie Smith lives at Twelfth street southeast near A street.

Hazel Gray, colored, 6 years old, of Thirteenth street northeast, near H street, was seriously hurt yesterday when she was struck, at Maryland avenue and Thirteenth street northeast, by an automobile said to have been driven by Frederick M. Gerabner, 40 years old, of Twentieth street, near Douglas street northeast.

The girl was removed to Casualty Hospital, where it was found she had a fractured skull.

Leader of Atheists Objects to Profanity

"How to Swear Without Acknowledging God" was the subject of Albert D. Bell, president of the Washington Chapter of the American Association for the Advancement of Atheism, who lectured at the meeting yesterday afternoon at 623 Louisiana avenue northwest.

"Atheists should have more respect for their teachings than deliberately to acknowledge God by their profanity," the speaker said. "There are so many other profane expressions that one can use without being 'blasphemous.'" gun, the two large safes also yielded jewelry estimated as worth about $5,000. There was about $15,000 in small currency in the safes.

Zuta Linked With Sale Of Police Force Jobs

Chicago, Jan. 18 (A.P.).—The name of Jack Zuta, slain gang overlord, was linked today with a specific charge of jobbuying in the Chicago police department. Less specifically, proceedings in a contest over his will brought forth testimony by a former State representative that Zuta had planned for himself a career as a political "power."

Both developments were unexpected. The statements of a former sweetheart brought about the arrest of Police Sergt. Jack Herdegen. On her testimony he was charged with using $1,500 obtained from Zuta to buy his promotion. The woman, Miss Bernice Shaw, said, "Herdegen threw me over, so I decided to talk." She described the officer as a "collector" on the near North Side and indicated that he helped levy tribute for Zuta.

The will hearing had dealt largely with the question of whether Zuta was a resident of Chicago until former State Representative Harry W Starr took the stand.

"Zuta told me," he said, "that he was busy politically and that he was forming an organization to support Thompson." Starr said. "He said that he expected to be a power in politics and that he was going hook, line and sinker for Thompson, because Thompson would do the same for him."

Young Woman Is Missing.

Police have been asked to search for Mrs. Lillie Marsh, 18 years old, who disappeared on January 16 from her home at 622 L street southeast. Her absence was reported by her husband, Ellis Marsh.

Tom Mix to Face Circus Suit Today

101 Ranch Owner Demands $325,000 for Breach of Contract.

Erie, Pa., Jan. 18 (A.P.).—Rivalry of the Ringling and 101 Ranch circus shows will be transferred from tanbark to courtroom tomorrow, with the opening here of a trial of the $325,000 suit for breach of contract brought by Col. Zack Miller, owner of the 101 Ranch, against Tom Mix, cowboy of the circus and films.

Mix, now employed by John Ringling, came here with Ringling's legal advisers, who are to assist in fighting the suit. With Miller came the wife Mix recently divorced. She will testify against him.

The suit involves an oral promise Mix gave Miller to serve with him, a promise never carried out, for Mix went to the Sells-Floto Circus. Miller has said it was agreed Mix was to receive $10,000 a week from the circus for which he was once a rider at $35 weekly.

Chest With Name Jesus Stirs Protest

Attempt to Identify Bones as Nazarene's Hit by Historian.

Berlin, Jan. 18. (N.Y.W.N.S.).—Prof. Lietzmann noted theologian and church historian of Berlin University, in an article supplied to the Evangelical Press Agency Service, protests against the sensational attempt to make it appear that the bones of Jesus recently were found by Prof. Sudenik, of Jerusalem University.

Prof. Sudenik reported last week that he had found a small chest of bones with the inscription on the cover, "Jesus, Son of Joseph."

Prof Lietzmann declares that Joseph is still a name in common use among Jews and that Jesus was equally common until the rise of Christianity made it unacceptable to them. He says, "No honest researcher can cherish the thought of identifying the bones in this chest with those of Jesus of Nazareth."

SILVER PRICE PLAN GIVEN AS TRADE AID

Smelting and Refining Head Suggests Control by "Commercial Union."

LINKS U. S. IN SCHEME

New York, Jan. 18 (A.P.).—A plan for improving world trade conditions by informally stabilizing silver at no fixed ratio to gold was made public today by its author, Francis H. Brownell, chairman of the American Smelting & Refining Co.

Believing the fall in the price of silver to record low levels has been due, not to overproduction, but to large sales by governments of silver formerly used as money. Mr. Brownell proposes:

First, an informal understanding among the United States, England (including India), France (including Indo-China) and as many other governments as possible, that no sale will be made for a stated period, or until further notice, of any silver owned by each government at less than a fixed price—for example, 50 cents an ounce.

Second, an understanding that the governments will purchase the amount of silver they now are authorized to acquire for subsidiary coinage, whenever the market price is under the figure agreed on.

Third, an agreement that the governments, particularly India, may sell government-owned silver whenever the price is more than 50 cents; for example, above the accepted quotation.

"It is necessary for India to agree to the plan," said Mr. Brownell, "as that is the country most likely to sell government-owned silver in the near future. Japan and China should also be consulted and tied to the agreement, and probably also Spain, which is perhaps the most potential seller of silver."

The plan proposes, Mr. Brownell submits, "a commercial union, formed much as in times of panic when leading banks and banking houses unite to protect the security market."

across the Spanish frontier. Here the princes ate a light lunch and obtained motor cars in order to speed the journey to Santander.

Their entry into Spain was at Irun at 2:20 p. m., where they received a cordial welcome from officials gathered on the international bridge.

Here the Prince of Wales tried his newly learned facility in the Spanish language—he studied especially for this trip to Latin America—and exchanged pleasantries with the reception committee. Both princes appeared somewhat fatigued from their journey, but smiled and waved at those who had gathered to see them. The royal party proceeded to San Sebastian, accompanied by eight motor loads of Spanish officials.

At San Sebastian they halted only long enough to express regret to the local officials because their scheduled visit had to be canceled, and proceeded southward along the famous Coastal road, which was in bad shape, because of heavy rains and snows.

But late at night they arrived, safe and tired, and went aboard the Oropesa, which had been brought to a dock from its anchorage in the stream in order to facilitate the embarkation.

Huge crowds were on the streets here, having waited throughout a dreary day, marked by high winds and sheets of rain, and the procession of cars was cheered as it rolled along toward the quayside.

Another great crowd had assembled at the dock and cheered when the heir to the British throne and his party climbed the gangplank. Shortly afterward the big liner was towed from the dock and headed for Coruna, the first port of call.

The first stop of the Oropesa, after once reaching the open ocean, will be at Hamilton, Bermuda. Thereafter halts will be made at Havana, and Kingston, Jamaica, before striking Central and South America. The trip will wind up in Argentina, where the Prince of Wales will open a British trade exposition in Buenos Aires.

bin and Davis, departed, leaving him with David Limerick and Richard Reed.

"A craps game was suggested by David and a session of gambling ensued," MacIntyre said, "and he won all the money of the others, and David left. A shot was heard at the rear of the house and David entered wearing a handkerchief over his face and holding a revolver in his hand."

David forced MacIntyre to hand over his winnings and was leaving the place when Reed grabbed the gun from him and tore the mask from his face, police said. David then said "it was a joke," according to MacIntyre. "Afterward David became angry, striking MacIntyre in the face and taking the money, which had been returned."

Gun of .32 Caliber.

David then left the house, according to MacIntyre, but was met by two policemen who came after hearing the shot. They were Paul W. Nicholson and F. G. Pilkerton, of the Fifth Precinct.

The gun was a .32 caliber revolver belonging to Reed. The policemen took David to the Fifth Precinct police station, where he was charged with disorderly conduct, MacIntyre failing to make a complaint.

David then forfeited $10 on a charge of disorderly conduct.

Reed, when questioned by Flaherty at the District Jail, corroborated MacIntyre's account of the holdup at the Limerick house, and admittted ownership of the gun.

SEASONAL PICK-UP IN BUSINESS NOTED

100,000 Car Workers Back on Partial Basis; Trade Index Unchanged.

PRICE CUTTING APPEARS

New York, Jan. 18 (A.P.).—More hands at work, more wheels turning and more stacks smoking were reported in dispatches from the business front during the past week.

While improvement has been spotty, and at best only seasonal, it has improved morale all along the line, and business men are beginning to agree with economists that the worst of the depression is about over.

Resumption of activity has been most pronounced in the steel and automobile industries, although the pickup in steel has lost some of the vigor of the previous week. Workers called back to their machines in the Detroit area during the past fortnight are estimated at more than 100,000, and although most are on only part time, the tendency is distinctly toward acceleration.

While a rapid pickup in employment in January is not to be expected in the light of normal seasonal trends, a fair gain in February has been an invariable development for several years.

Bottom of Decline Seen.

The Labor Bureau's figures for manufacturing employment in December gave good grounds for the belief that the decline was dragging bottom, for despite inventory shutdowns, and the completion of autumn trade, the decline was less than 2 per cent, a smaller drop than was reported for November, or for December of 1929.

It was notable, also, that the Annalist's index of business activity as preliminary reported for December, showed negligible change from November. As this index is weighted for seasonal trend, it appeared that the further recession in December was only of a seasonal character, and it was indicated, tentatively at least, that strong resistance to the influences of depression had developed.

Iron Age's weekly review placed steel mill operations at 44 per cent of capacity, a gain of 2 points from the rate reported a week previously. While the further gain was moderate, the steel trade was cheered by the firmer tendency in prices, as a fair inquiry has developed on the basis of increases of $1 to $2 a ton announced for the first quarter. The steel scrap market was also firmer.

Automobile Prices Cut.

The rate of automobile production during coming weeks is expected to depend very largely on the character of sales reports. Efforts to attract sales by low prices continue. Following General Motors announcement of a large increase in sales of its low-priced line in December, Ford Motor Co. announced a price reduction ranging up to $45 a unit.

Price cutting has appeared in other lines, namely rubber tires, again in crude petroleum and in chemicals. The general level of commodity prices, nevertheless, continues to hold relatively stable. For the fifth successive week, the Annalist's weekly price index showed an almost negligible change, which has been the best performance in about a year.

The plan to stabilize sugar appeared to have reached a point where success was within grasp. Silver prices again declined, however, after a rally in response to reports of plans to extend a loan to China. The idea of a Chinese loan has brought out some adverse or skeptical opinion from banking quarters.

Wall Street Briefs

New York, Jan. 18 (A.P.).—Municipal financing scheduled for award this week totals $13,926,847, compared with actual offerings of $19,831,000 in that class last week, the Bond Buyer reports. The largest award consists of $5,000,000 State of Missouri 4 per cent road bonds to be placed Wednesday. Tuesday Jacksonville, Fla., will place an issue of $2,000,000 refunding bonds. King County, Wash., is to place an issue of $1,250,000 Tuesday.

The Westinghouse Electric & Manufacturing Co. has received an order from the Sperry Gyroscope Co. of New York for the manufacture of a gyroscopic stabilizer and electric control equipment specified by the Italian ministry of marine for an Italian warship, the new 2,000-ton destroyer Leader Figafetta.

Middle West Utilities Co. completed 1930 with a total of 84,885 holders of both preferred and common stocks, an increase of approximately 31 per cent during the year, a tabulation made public by Martin J. Insull, president, shows. Every State in the Union is represeted on the roster of stockholders. The list also shows stockholders residing in the British Isles, in practically every nation of continental Europe, South America, Africa and the Far East.

BOND FLOTATIONS FEATURE MARKET

New Offerings for Week of $253,000,000 Reach Record Figures.

SLIGHT REACTION NOTED

New York, Jan. 18 (A.P.).—Industry received a helping hand from the bond market last week.

The improved demand for coupon-bearing obligations, which has developed since the middle of December, resulted last week in bond offerings of record breaking proportions. The total of $253,000,000, of which $157,000,000 was for loans to public utilities, was the investment banking world's way of saying that better times for bonds are here again.

The total was the largest since the corresponding week in 1930, when $305,000,000 in new issues were brought out. Investment houses were distinctly pleased with the reception accorded the new issues and the end of the week saw a large portion of the huge volume of bonds moved into private strong boxes.

As was to be expected, the competition from that quarter had an adverse effect on listed issues. Institutions like to make large purchases at one price and the slackening in demand for seasoned issues brought a slight reaction in the bond market, but the offerings were much smaller in the last three days and investment issues resumed their forward advance. The cut in time money rates to the lowest level of half a century was a constructive development for the bond market and United States Governments moved upward at a good pace, several issues surpassing the two-year peak price set last fall.

With the start of a new week there was considerable interest in new financing, while estimates of the amount in prospect ranged as high as $350,000,000, it was believed in banking circles that that amount would be spread over several weeks. Issues so far have been of the type readily marketable and it was believed that offering houses would await more definite signs of trade improvement before marketing issues that are not in that classification.

CURB AGAIN RULED BY PROFESSIONALS

Declines and Rallies Are Held for Only Brief Intervals During Week.

SALES VOLUME SLUMPS

New York, Jan. 18 (A.P.).—The curb market is going through a period of extreme irregularity in which both declines and advances are held for comparatively brief intervals. Speculative sentiment last week was loath to commit itself very definitely to either side and activity shriveled. Professional buying and selling accounted for much of what little volume there was.

On the whole, the market was susceptible to pressure from the bears and much of the news affecting individual issues was of a character that induced selling. British American Tobacco reacted on the announcement of a reduced dividend distribution. Richfield Oil was depressed by the receivership, while General Baking issues were adversely influenced by the capital readjustment.

Oils were sold on the development of further unsettling factors in the industry, notably a cut in crude prices by Gulf and Humble. Cities Service had a late rally.

There was still considerable buying in numerous preferred stocks. Speculative and semispeculative issues in this category showed the widest advances. Utility common stocks were highly irregular. Electric Bond & Share lost about 4 points, reacting to 40. American Gas & Electric dropped 6 but made partial recovery.

Associated Gas and Electric Company

January 16, 1931.

To the Holders of 5% Gold Debentures, Series A, due September 1, 1953, of Rochester Central Power Corporation:

Associated Gas and Electric Company hereby offers to holders of the above mentioned debentures the opportunity, for a limited period, subject to the conditions stated below and in the letter of deposit hereinafter mentioned, of exchanging their present holdings of such debentures, on a par for par basis, for Convertible 5% Gold Debentures, due 1950, of Associated Gas and Electric Company, which mature February 1, 1950, with interest payable February 1 and August 1 in each year. Accrued interest will be adjusted (as explained below) in such manner as to make unnecessary any cash payment by the depositors at the time of the exchange.

Manufacturers Trust Company, W. C. Langley & Co. and Bonbright & Company, Incorporated, the bankers who originally offered the debentures of Rochester Central Power Corporation have advised us, as shown by the letter printed below, that they approve of this offer and will recommend to their customers the deposit of their holdings of debentures of Rochester Central Power Corporation for such exchange.

The Convertible 5% Gold Debentures, due 1950, offered in exchange, are direct unconditional obligations of Associated Gas and Electric Company and rank equally with its other debenture issues. The outstanding debentures of this issue are now qualified for investment by life insurance companies in New York State. A circular descriptive of this issue will be furnished on request.

Consolidated net earnings of Associated Gas and Electric Company and its subsidiaries, as shown in the above mentioned circular, after depreciation, for the twelve months ending October 31, 1930 (assuming the acquisition by Associated Gas and Electric Company of all the outstanding preferred stock of Rochester Central Power Corporation under an offer of exchange of even date herewith), were equal to 2.08 times the interest charges on all debt of this Company, whether funded or unfunded (excluding obligations convertible into stock at its option), and interest charges on all debt, whether funded or unfunded, and dividends on preferred stocks of all its subsidiaries. Regardless of the acquisition of any outstanding preferred stock of Rochester Central Power Corporation, the earnings ratio is more than twice such interest and dividend charges and is substantially higher than the earnings ratio, on a similar basis, for the debentures of Rochester Central Power Corporation.

The Associated Gas and Electric System is one of the large public utility groups. It includes not only the Rochester Central Power Corporation and subsidiaries, but also other important electric and gas properties in New York, New Jersey and Pennsylvania, and properties, mostly electric and gas, in many other states. These properties are much more diversified both territorially and in character of industry served than those of the Rochester Central Power Corporation group.

The indenture under which these debentures will be issued provides that, except as security for purchase money obligations, and temporary loans or indemnity for periods not exceeding one year, the Company will not mortgage or pledge any of its property without ratably securing these debentures.

This offer is subject to the condition that Associated Gas and Electric Company will not be obligated to make any exchange unless at least $10,000,000 principal amount of said 5% Gold Debentures, Series A, of Rochester Central Power Corporation are deposited for exchange under this offer with the Depositary named below before the expiration of the period of this offer or any extension or extensions thereof; but the undersigned may, at its option, by written notice to the Depositary within five days after the expiration of the period of this offer or any extension or extensions thereof, accept for such exchange all debentures deposited under this offer, even though they aggregate less than $10,000,000 in principal amount. This offer will expire at the close of business on April 16, 1931, unless extended by the undersigned, at its option, by written notice to the Depositary, for a period or periods not exceeding sixty days thereafter.

If at the close of business on April 16, 1931, or if at any time thereafter prior to the expiration of any extension or extensions of the period of this offer, at least $10,000,000 principal amount of said 5% Gold Debentures, Series A, of Rochester Central Power Corporation shall have been deposited with the Depositary, or if the undersigned shall elect by the written notice above mentioned to accept for exchange all debentures deposited under this offer, the exchange shall forthwith become operative.

Holders desiring to accept this offer must deposit their debentures with The Chase National Bank of the City of New York, 11 Broad Street, New York City, Depositary, and accompany the same by a letter of deposit, which will be furnished by the Depositary or the undersigned upon request, filled out and signed as indicated thereon. Deposit receipts will be issued, which will be non-transferable unless written request is made of the Depositary for a deposit receipt in transferable form. Non-transferable receipts will be exchangeable for transferable receipts.

Interest coupons maturing March 1, 1931 on debentures of Rochester Central Power Corporation should be detached and retained for presentation in the usual course when due. To adjust interest for the five months' period from March 1, 1931 to August 1, 1931 the undersigned will pay or cause to be paid to the depositors or their assigns, upon the delivery to them of the debentures of Associated Gas and Electric Company, five months' interest at the rate of 5% per annum. The debentures of the Associated Gas and Electric Company will bear coupons for interest accruing from and after August 1, 1931.

The Convertible 5% Gold Debentures, due 1950, of Associated Gas and Electric Company will be delivered to the Depositary, in permanent form, within thirty days after the exchange shall have become operative; otherwise, the deposited debentures of Rochester Central Power Corporation will be returned to depositors or their assigns, without cost to them. All charges of the Depositary and all expenses in connection with the preparation and delivery of such debentures of Associated Gas and Electric Company will be paid by the undersigned.

Very truly yours,

Vice-President and Treasurer.

January 16, 1931.

To the Holders of 6% Cumulative Preferred Stock of Rochester Central Power Corporation:

Associated Gas and Electric Company hereby offers to holders of shares of the above mentioned Preferred Stock the opportunity, for a limited period, subject to the conditions stated below and in the letter of deposit hereinafter mentioned, of exchanging their present holdings of such Preferred Stock for fully paid and non-assessable $6 Dividend Series Preferred Stock, without par value, of Associated Gas and Electric Company, with cumulative dividends payable quarterly, March 1, June 1, September 1, and December 1, in each year, on a share for share basis. Upon delivery pursuant to such exchange, dividends are to be adjusted so as to be continuous and not overlapping.

Manufacturers Trust Company, W. C. Langley & Co. and Bonbright & Company, Incorporated, the bankers who originally offered the Preferred Stock of Rochester Central Power Corporation, have advised us, as shown by the letter printed below, that they approve of this offer and will recommend to their customers the deposit of their holdings of Preferred Stock of Rochester Central Power Corporation for such exchange.

The $6 Dividend Series Preferred Stock offered in exchange is of equal rank with all other Preferred Stocks of Associated Gas and Electric Company, and is preferred over the Cumulative Preference Stock, Class A Stock, Class B Stock and Common Stock of Associated Gas and Electric Company as to assets and dividends. It is now qualified for investment by life insurance companies in New York State. A circular descriptive of this Preferred Stock will be furnished on request.

Consolidated net earnings of Associated Gas and Electric Company and its subsidiaries, as shown in the above mentioned circular, after depreciation and after interest charges on all debt, whether funded or unfunded, of this Company and its subsidiaries and dividends on preferred stocks of all its subsidiaries (assuming the exchange of 94,240 shares of Preferred Stock of Rochester Central Power Corporation under this offer), for the twelve months ending October 31, 1930, were equal to more than six times the annual dividends on the Preferred Stocks of this Company, of all series. This earnings ratio is very much higher than the earnings ratio, on a similar basis, for the Preferred Stock of Rochester Central Power Corporation.

The Associated Gas and Electric System is one of the large public utility groups. It includes not only the Rochester Central Power Corporation and subsidiaries, but also other important electric and gas properties in New York, New Jersey and Pennsylvania, and properties, mostly electric and gas, in many other states. These properties are much more diversified both territorially and in character of industry served than those of the Rochester Central Power Corporation group.

This offer is subject to the condition that Associated Gas and Electric Company will not be obligated to make any exchange unless at least 48,000 shares of such Preferred Stock of Rochester Central Power Corporation are deposited for exchange under this offer with the Depositary named below before the expiration of the period of this offer or any extension or extensions thereof; but the undersigned may, at its option, by written notice to the Depositary within five days after the expiration of the period of this offer or any extension or extensions thereof, accept for such exchange all Preferred Stock deposited under this offer, though less than 48,000 shares. This offer will expire at the close of business on April 16, 1931 unless extended by the undersigned, at its option, by written notice to the Depositary, for a period or periods not exceeding sixty days thereafter.

If at the close of business on April 16, 1931, or if at any time thereafter prior to the expiration of any extension or extensions of the period of this offer, at least 48,000 shares of said Preferred Stock of Rochester Central Power Corporation shall have been deposited with the Depositary, or if the undersigned shall elect by the written notice above mentioned to accept for exchange all Preferred Stock deposited under said offer, the exchange shall forthwith become operative.

Holders desiring to accept this offer must deposit their Preferred Stock with The Chase National Bank of the City of New York, 11 Broad Street, New York City, Depositary, and accompany the same by a letter of deposit, which will be furnished by the Depositary or the undersigned upon request, filled out and signed as indicated thereon. We will provide stock transfer stamps at our expense. Deposit receipts will be issued, which will be non-transferable unless written request is made of the Depositary for a deposit receipt in transferable form. Non-transferable receipts will be exchangeable for transferable receipts.

Certificates for the $6 Dividend Series Preferred Stock of Associated Gas and Electric Company, in permanent form, will be delivered to the Depositary within thirty days after the exchange shall have become operative; otherwise, the deposited stock will be returned to depositors or their assigns, without cost to them (other than stock transfer taxes in case of any transfer of a deposit receipt in transferable form). All charges of the Depositary and all expenses in connection with the preparation and delivery of the $6 Dividend Series Preferred Stock of Associated Gas and Electric Company will be paid by the undersigned.

Very truly yours,
ASSOCIATED GAS AND ELECTRIC COMPANY,
By H. C. HOPSON,
Vice-President and Treasurer.

GENTLEMEN:

We acknowledge receipt of your letters of January 15, 1931, notifying us that you propose to offer to the holders of 5% Gold Debentures, Series A, due September 1, 1953, and 6% Cumulative Preferred Stock of Rochester Central Power Corporation the privilege of exchanging their holdings in such Debentures and Preferred Stock, respectively, for your Convertible 5% Gold Debentures, due 1950, on a par for par basis, and for your $6 Dividend Series Preferred Stock on a share for share basis, respectively, upon the terms, subject to the conditions and based on the facts stated in your letters and accompanying documents.

As Bankers who participated in the original offering of the Debentures and the Preferred Stock of Rochester Central Power Corporation, we have given the question of the advisability of these exchanges careful consideration, and this is to inform you that we approve the proposed offers and will recommend to our customers the exchange of their holdings of Debentures and Preferred Stock of Rochester Central Power Corporation under said offers.

Longworth's Sister Arrives At Memorial

Comtesse de Chambrun Seeks Family Relics of Lafayette.

DESPITE the fact that Washington seldom sees Comtesse Clara Longworth de Chambrun and hears of her only through her various literary achievements, society is none the less interested in her activities in far-off Paris.

The energetic sister of the Speaker of the House is engaged in promoting a Franco-American memorial in the old Lafayette Castle, on behalf of her distinguished husband, a lineal descendent of the Revolutionary hero.

The Lafayette estate, La Grange, between Paris and Melun, is still owned by the family, in the name of Comte Louis de Lasteyrie.

Neither Comte Louis nor his brother, Marquis Louis de Lasteyrie, has any descendants, and since the property, in that case, would go to the state, the remainder of the family, under the leadership of Comtesse de Chambrun, is working to establish a memorial.

It is her desire to gather all the scattered Lafayette relics and family heirlooms and to house them at the historic estate, making it a shrine like Mount Vernon and Monticello. Practically all the treasures are scattered, although many are held by descendants.

In her efforts toward the memorial Comtesse de Chambrun has been trying to find the relics and heirlooms which were stolen from her husband's home at St. Mihiel in the World War, although after her repeated claims the German government recently replied it had been unable to locate any of the precious articles.

Shortly before the war Comte de Chambrun, then captain and French military attache at the embassy in Washington, was ordered to St. Mihiel. He and his American wife took with them all the Lafayette relics that had been divided among the descendants of the general's two daughters, Virginia and Anastasie.

The Chambrun lot contained unique engravings, family portraits, medals, miniatures, American Revolutionary War maps and other things of value. Only one piece has been seen since the war, an engraving of Lafayette which a German commander had used as a decoration in his office in the St. Mihiel town hall, from which he was driven by the American advance.

A VOTE YOU CAST EVERY DAY

In America the people rule. They put parties in and out of power as they see fit. They choose presidents, governors and mayors. The law makers who do not do their bidding do not stay long on the job . . .

So the people control business. They buy what they like. What doesn't please them they pass by. Some concerns succeed and others do not—their fate is in the hands of the people

In politics the people vote only at regular intervals. In business it's an every-day affair. By ballots in one case; by hard-earned dollars in the other. And every day more people vote in this way for A&P stores than for any other.

Only stores that serve the public well can stay on the job for 71 years.

STATES AS BEGGARS.

The willingness of States and cities to take charity from the United States Government is a reproach to the old American spirit. Several communities have brought shame upon themselves by asking for Federal relief before taxing their own resources. In other communities business men are raising the cry, "charity begins at home," in support of their assertion that they are already heavily burdened in keeping their enterprises going, thereby avoiding discharge of employes. They say they are helping the unemployment relief funds of their home towns, and they use this fact as an excuse for refusing to contribute to the American Red Cross.

It is true that "charity begins at home." But why is this precept ignored by the governors of the States? So far as known, the sovereign and proud State of Arkansas has not lifted a finger to care for the drought sufferers within its borders. At any rate, it has not done its best. If any one should suggest relief to Arkansas on the ground that it was bankrupt and without credit, the people of that State would be deeply resentful. But the spokesmen of Arkansas in Congress are howling for help from the United States when their own State government is capable of borrowing money and relieving its own people. Charity, from their point of view, should begin in Washington.

Arkansas is mentioned merely as an example of what all the States are doing. They are shirking their duty when they demand a dole from the United States Treasury except as a desperate and final resort. Not a single State has reached that stage. The bonds of any State are gilt-edged, exempt from the Federal income tax, and salable in the open market. The governors are installed, and perfectly capable of calling the legislatures into extraordinary session to deal with the emergency. Immediate advances could be made in most of the States, to be replaced by funds raised by a bond issue.

If any State should come forward and certify that it has tried to raise emergency funds upon its credit and is unable to do so, it should be assisted by Congress in feeding its people. Such a situation would be comparable to invasion by an enemy, in which case the Federal Government is empowered to act. But until a State has faithfully tried to relieve its citizens and finds that it can not perform that duty, Congress should refuse to encourage the tendency of the States to become mendicants.

The discussion in Congress indicates that many legislators are confused over this question. They are inclined to yield to the demand for a $25,000,000 appropriation to be used for relieving distress within the States. The champions for this dole are very urgent, evidently hoping to rush through the appropriation before Congress grasps the fact that the States are shirking their duty.

The twenty drought States have credit. They can easily borrow $25,000,000, or even $50,000,000. Every State in which the unemployed must be fed can finance this relief. There is no excuse for a raid upon the Treasury. The plan to take $25,000,000 from the Treasury and hand it to the Red Cross is an attempt to saddle upon the United States a burden that should be borne by the States. It is high time for the representatives of "grand old commonwealths" to resist the movement that would falsely advertise their States as bankrupts and beggars.

KANSAS IS WILLING.

The legislature of Kansas retains its vision and its hope regardless of the hard times and the drought. It has sent up to Congress a resolution proposing a cure for many of Kansas' ills. The Sunflower State, it seems, is afflicted with too much land and not enough employment. Why doesn't Congress buy up its submarginal land and plant it to forests?

Kansas smiles with the thought of what such a project would mean. Unprofitable farms would no longer compete in the grain market. Agricultural surpluses could be turned into timber to supplement the Nation's failing supply. Farming would again become profitable, and beautiful stretches of forest over the prairie would furnish a new source of employment to native sons.

As if that were not enough to make the congressional head swim with visions of Utopia, it should also be said that this program would put an end to floods, as well as soil erosion, which costs the farmers millions every year, and would improve the climate and regulate rainfall. Congress could solve the farm problem and a dozen other problems at one stroke.

Of course, the Kansas legislature can not claim the honor of having originated this plan. The Department of Agriculture has been venturing advice along the same line for years. No one has ever found anything wrong with the project. Every one joins in praising it, and urging its adoption. The country produces too much food and not enough timber. The solution offered by Kansas is so simple and yet so far-reaching that one wonders why it was not adopted years ago.

Up to this point it is easy to be optimistic. But it is necessary to reflect that Kansas is sending this petition up to Congress. The opportunity is "surrendered" to the Federal Government. Kansas is willing to permit the Government to finance the whole project.

THE FIVE-DAY WEEK.

The American Federation of Labor has taken a definite stand in favor of the five-day week. Its resolution on the subject was directed particularly to the Government, but William Green, president, leaves no doubt as to the federation's attitude toward shorter hours in private industry.

Does the federation regard the five-day week as an emergency measure? Is a reduction of the weekly wage in proportion to the cut in working hours contemplated? These questions are of vital importance. It is one thing to regard the five-day week merely as a palliative for unemployment, and another to consider it as a permanent improvement in the status of the working man.

The theory on which the five-day week is usually justified is that there is not enough work in the world for every one. That is true at present, but working conditions are far from normal. When the economic balance is restored men will either have to work six days per week or more labor-saving machinery will have to be invented, or the standard of living must be lowered. A man can not produce as much in five days as he can in six, and there is no use in pretending that he can. It is reasonable to assume that more and better machinery will be employed in the manufacturing processes, but that will only increase the daily capacity of the individual, whether he works five days or six.

From an economic standpoint the question of the five-day week resolves itself into this: Would the individual workman prefer to work five days with five days' pay, or six days with six days' pay? To assume that the economic structure of the future will allow the average man to work only five days is to postulate a static condition. Human wants are insatiable. As rapidly as civilization progresses new demands for goods will be created. If the proper balance is maintained between supply and consuming power every man can produce up to the limit of his capacity without creating a surplus.

It is possible, of course, that workingmen would rather have an extra day of leisure each week than a higher income. Labor is subject to the laws of diminishing utility, just as any other commodity. But there is no economic foundation for the belief that working hours must be shortened in the future to avoid glutting the labor market. The fact that there exists a surplus of labor at present indicates a maladjustment between production and the ability to consume. Some foodstuffs and other goods are being overproduced, but on the other hand thousands are in need of the necessities of life. This situation will not be corrected by shortening of the working day, but by adjustment of supply to demand.

Shorter hours reduce productive capacity and thereby curtail the individual's income and his consuming power. Does labor prefer greater leisure, or greater income? Whatever action is taken relative to the five-day week ought to turn on this fundamental question.

HIGH-POWER RADIO STATIONS.

The Radio Commission has not as yet acted upon the applications of certain broadcasting stations for permission to increase their power output to 50,000 watts. Two factors, do doubt, contribute to the delay. The first is the practical difficulty of singling out from the comparatively large number of stations that have filed applications those to which the privilege of boosting their power output should be granted. The other is the fixed belief of the public that high power inevitably destroys the efficiency of neighboring stations and is a cause of additional interference.

This belief is a heritage of the early days of broadcasting, when high power was not subject to the control with which radio engineers have since learned to surround it. Today a 50,000-watt station, instead of contributing to interference, destroys it. If its equipment is modern and properly managed it does not encroach upon the channel assignments of other stations. Radio engineers are so well satisfied with the improvements made possible by the use of 50,000-watt power that they are already looking forward to the 100,000-watt station. One shortcoming of broadcasting which they confidently believe they will be able to overcome with the so-called superstations is the disparity in the quality of reception in summer as compared with winter.

The Radio Commission should be able to work out a program under which the maximum number of channels permitted under the law may be utilized by 50,000-watt stations, and it should be able to select the stations that are best fitted to take advantage of the privilege of using superpower. The one and only way to prove to the public that power boosts are not detrimental to satisfactory reception is by permitting as many stations as possible to operate with 50,000-watt power.

FREAK RACING.

It is distinctly encouraging that Daytona, Fla., has not posted the guarantee demanded by Capt. Malcolm Campbell, British racing car driver, to stage his race against time on the beach of that city. Capt. Campbell sailed recently for the United States, but announced that unless satisfactory financial arrangements were made he would continue on to New Zealand, where there is a 90-mile beach upon which his freak racer can be put through its paces.

The fact that Daytona has not posted the required guarantee seemingly indicates that public interest in suicidal races of this nature is dying out. Capt. Campbell seeks to better the mark of 231 miles an hour set by Sir Henry Segrave, who subsequently was killed in attempting to establish a new speed record for motor boats. Nothing useful would be accomplished by shoving the 231-mile record further upward. The chances are that the person who makes the attempt will be killed.

A campaign is under way to shame Daytona into raising the guarantee. Capt. Campbell's threat to proceed to New Zealand constitutes, of itself, an open effort to stir American pride to the point where the funds he needs for the trials will be forthcoming. It is to be hoped, however, that Capt. Campbell will be allowed to proceed to New Zealand.

THE POWER QUESTION

By W. H. GRIMES,
Washington Correspondent of the Wall Street Journal.

There are two rather surprising things about this whole Washington discussion on power which recently manifested itself in the fuss over the Federal Power Commission and will manifest itself again soon in the squabble over Muscle Shoals. One thing is the apparent popular bewilderment about the whole matter and the second is the apparent reluctance of the administration to put the proposition before the country in its true light. The latter is the more surprising feature of the two, since it could be done to the administration's extreme advantage.

The power row is one of government versus private ownership and operation. Not all, but a good many, of the liberals will deny that, but their denials fail to stand up in the face of facts.

There are two distinct angles to the question as it shapes up here in Washington. One concerns water generated power alone and the other fuel generated power.

Over the latter the Federal Government has no control unless it is transmitted across State lines and becomes interstate commerce. The liberals say that power so transmitted, while now a small percentage of the total, is increasingly important. They say they want Federal regulation. If that was all they really wanted, they could have it, for it is pretty generally conceded here that a regulatory bill could be passed by Congress and signed by the President. He has advocated as much in his messages.

Over water generated power the Government has another approach because water power sites not already in private hands can be had only by lease from the Federal Government. Its authority in this respect arises from its control over navigable streams.

The Federal Power Commission is in charge of this leasing and the liberals want a commission which will assert its authority over all streams, even those so little navigated that they might be left to the States, and which will exercise the most minute supervision over lessees' investment in development of the site. First effect of that would be to keep all but the most desirable sites out of private hands and leave them for possible future development by the Government along the lines now proposed for Muscle Shoals. Second effect of holding down lessees' investment accounts would be to make a recapture of the site by the Government at the end of 50 years very cheap.

A third angle of the power question revolves around Muscle Shoals where the liberal argument is pretty well stripped of pretensions. The bill which they want Congress to pass provides outright Government ownership and operation of production and transmission facilities in several States. Those who are not quite ready to stand on an outright Government ownership basis say that they want this to furnish a test between the cheapness of power produced by the Government and by private interests. However, if any one suggests that the Government undertaking be put on the same accounting basis as a private undertaking, he is immediately denounced as an ally of the "power trust."

The astonishing thing is that no one in authority steps forward to unmask the whole fabric of pretensions. For instance, it is hard to see why President Hoover does not take up the challenge being offered him by assuming a decided position against Government ownership and by offering to go before the country on that basis in 1932. He would have excellent opportunity to do that if the House would let the Norris Muscle Shoals bill come to him for a veto. All indications now are that the administration forces in the House are attempting to prevent that very thing from happening.

I can run, I can dance, I can laugh, I can shout
And I'm blamed if I'll travel around

That I'm broke!

I can still romp around with the kiddies
At night!
I haven't neuritis; I haven't the flu!
I still have a fairly good foot in each

I am able to gather the point of a

I'm just broke!

Nothing has happened to me

My appetite's good and I'm strong

The Sheep Protected From Wolves Are Doomed When the Sheep Dog Becomes a Killer.

By ROBERT QUILLEN

THE crimes of the racketeer and the bandit are commonly regarded as a menace to civilization unequaled in this generation. Yet there is another kind of crime, even more widespread and almost as frequent, that should cause much greater anxiety.

It is the violation of trust—the theft of money or connivance with rogues by men whom the public has honored with its confidence.

Each day's gleaning of news reveals another traitor—a bank official who has gambled with and lost a community's savings, an agent of the law who has sold protection to criminals, a public servant who has appropriated to his own use the money trusted to his care.

The law has various names for such offenses, none of them as harsh as the word "theft," but a rose by any other name is still a rose and a thief by any other name is still a thief.

And these crimes—these violations of trust—are a much greater threat to established civilization than all the evil done by the thousands of rogues who are habitual enemies of the law.

Does that seem an exaggeration?

When is the throne most endangered? When numbers of malcontents, long recognized as enemies, become unusually troublesome? Or when the officers of the King's Guard plot treason?

Which is the greater menace to religion—a group of agnostics openly scorning it, or a clergy giving lip service while secretly convinced of its fallacy?

Which is the greater threat to a tree—an army of locusts that attack the leaves, or a disease that destroys the roots?

In all ages and in all lands criminals have operated in open conflict with the law, but they are merely external irritants—not a disease of the blood. They are a class apart—congenital rebels, outlaws schooled in the wrong environment, weaklings, dullards—a class hated and feared by society and therefore a class without power to corrupt a civilization.

But when the trusted agents and servants of the people violate their trust in ever increasing number and the very frequency of their treachery dulls the edge of that moral indignation which alone can control and punish them, then it is manifest that the moral sense of civilization is dead.

Where men do not love honor for its own sake, there is no security except in locks and bars.

And when the heart of a tree is rotten, the whole tree is threatened by that decay.

Wire Tapping.

New York World.

To the surprise of most drys, as well as of most wets, the House committee on expenditures in the executive departments has voted to investigate the activities of the Prohibition Bureau in tapping wires for information. The committee will begin its investigation January 29.

Wire tapping is one of the lesser activities of the Prohibition Bureau. It is only one small item among the many legitimate reasons for dissatisfaction which may be found in the methods used to enforce prohibition and in the results which prohibition has achieved. Nevertheless, the decision of the House committee to initiate this investigation is interesting and perhaps significant. To the best of our memory, this is the first time in ten years that a committee of Congress has ordered an inquiry which indicates a critical attitude toward any phase of prohibition.

Owen Young Turns It Down.

Morristown Jerseyman.

Dispatches from Washington indicate that some of the National Democratic leaders do not coddle much to the idea of handing the Democratic presidential nomination to the Hon. Franklin D. Roosevelt next year, and that they are now actively laying plans to get the nomination for the Hon. Owen D. Young, the ablest Democrat of them all, and now head of the General Electric Co.

The Democrats will not nominate Mr. Young. He is too capitalistic, too monopolistic, too able. Furthermore, Mr. Young would not permit himself to be nominated.

Too Much Raskob Money.

Detroit News.

Weeks ago, an apparent effort by the Raskob-Shouse group to appropriate the results of the November congressional elections and capitalize a movement looking to the nomination of Owen D. Young for President in 1932, impelled us in these columns to ask, "Has Raskob bought the Democratic party?"

The inquiry is now brought to issue very pointedly. While Mr. Raskob denies selfish intent and denies his is the sole role as Democratic "angel," Frank R. Kent, a Baltimore newspaper man and author, makes it appear much like a political purchase. The Kent charges of Raskob donations and loans, which far exceed any from other sources, in part are confirmed by the official reports required under the Federal corrupt practice laws.

Let the trial of the question proceed. Too much money spent in politics by any individual or group means obligations that properly are suspected. And we do not think the use of such large funds necessary either in State or national politics.

Results of Direct Primary.

Mankato Free Press.

The rise to power of the bloc system in Congress has been coincident with the extension of the direct primary. Nobody in their own States thinks of Senators Norris or Nye or Brookhart as a real Republican. Each bears a false label. The direct primary particularly favors the self-advertiser of showy qualities at the expense of the man who is unequipped or unwilling to make a spectacular campaign. And it is a striking anomaly that the very system, which was so loudly proclaimed as a panacea for political ills and a guarantee of the rule of the majority, has led to an enormous spending of money and consequent countless investigations and to the strengthening of the power of organized minorities at Washington.

LETTERS TO THE EDITOR.

Hints That Democrats Broke Market to Destroy Hoover.

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: The flaming statement of Mr. Lucas that the Democrats seek the destruction of Mr. Hoover to gain the Presidency in 1932 is another sample of the artillery of paper wads fired by Republican campaign managers. Republicans talk in a pigeon-livered, abstract manner. The Democrats are more concrete. The Republicans hope to win with wordy literature, whereas the Democrats, knowing the best man alive can be destroyed, make knife thrusts and turn the knife in the wound. All during 1930, when the administration sought the recovery of the stock market, the Democratic moguls in Wall street replied by dumping stocks.

"Rollo, be good," methods never won a campaign, nor old woman jargon over the backyard fence. Two things hit the Republicans concretely in 1930: First, the June slump in stocks, and, second, the drought. The latter was an act of God, and may be alleviated but not avoided. It served, however, to help the moguls who engineered the June slump; in fact, it carried the slump much further than they wanted it to go. The shrinkage in stock values now amounts to more than 50 billions.

The New York Stock Exchange prints an official list of each day's transactions. This list will show that on the day Mr. Hoover signed the tariff bill great blocks of certain stocks were dumped on the market. Whether these transactions were short or long who can say without an investigation? The dumping was particularly noticeable in General Motors, Du Pont and Warner Pictures. The market became utterly demoralized and has been so ever since, causing untold misery and ruin to investors. The Republicans have never had the nerve to investigate that day's transactions on the exchange. Hon. Will Wood wanted to, but was called off. EMOLAS.

Virginia Democrat Condemns Filibuster That Aims at an Extra Session.

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: Your editorial captioned "The Filibuster," represents the sentiment of the vast majority of the thinking people of this country regardless of political affiliation. Knowing, as he must, that the House rules confine appropriations to items previously authorized by Congress and the President, the motion back of the resolution of Senator Robinson to tack on an appropriation of $25,000,000 to one of the regular supply bills is so apparent that no explanation is necessary.

To make a long story short, nothing is more certain, not even taxes and death, than that the Democratic party is doomed to overwhelming defeat in 1932 if an extra session of Congress is forced at this time by the leaders of that party, and the tactics now being applied on Capitol Hill will certainly lead to that eventuality if continued.

As to the merits or demerits of an appropriation of $25,000,000 I have no comment or criticism to offer, but it has no place in the regular supply bills, especially in view of the fact that it is well known that similar attempts have frequently been resorted to in Congress for the sole purpose of filibustering, without any hope and in many cases without any desire of seeing the proposed legislation enacted.

A special session of Congress is not wanted at this time, not only by the business men of the country, but by the wage-earners and salaried employes as well, because the bread and butter of the latter depends on a revival of business at the earliest possible moment. From whatever angle the situation is viewed the party that lends its efforts to any procedure which will lead to an extra session is already doomed to defeat in 1932, and rightly so.

VIRGINIA DEMOCRAT.

Don't Monkey With the Monument Grounds, Says Old-Timer.

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: I can't understand why any one should want to manicure and powder puff and lipstick the Monument Grounds, as we have grown fond of calling them. It looks to me like a piece of vandalism.

Sunken gardens, historical statuary groups and classic columns are all right in their place, and I like their looks as much as anybody does. But I think it would be a shame to set them in a spot whose rare, semi-rural charm is a part of American history.

As the City Beautiful goes on improving in artificial magnificence, the restful influence of that grass-grown spot will be more and more appreciated. To change the old Monument Grounds into something else would, in my opinion, be sacrilegious. And I do not doubt that many old, as well as young, Washingtonians think as I do. C. R. P.

Bob Lucas Described as Alert and a Good Leader.

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: The appropriate reply of Mr. Lucas to the Smith suggestion for an apology for distribution of campaign literature and the like is characteristic of the Republican executive director. It shows the brilliant Kentuckian to be alert, a man of action and a good leader. Hence the anxiety on the part of certain Democratic interests because of these outstanding qualities. Led by men of this caliber, the Republican party will enter the 1932 presidential campaign with confidence.

Unfortunately for the Democratic party, it is "tied up," so to speak, by reason of its apparent obligation to interested financial sources, and consequently must depend upon calamity howling. INDEPENDENT.

Probably Unnoticeable.

Indianapolis News: If the 130 new dry agents that the Prohibition Bureau has asked for, in addition to its present 1,400, are allowed, the country will presumably be almost 10 per cent dryer. Whether this will be noticeable or not is uncertain.

LABOR GOVERNMENT FACING OVERTHROW

Series of Tests in Prospect as Parliament Opens in Great Britain.

LIBERALS STUDY PLANS

London, Jan. 18 (A.P.)—With reassembling of Parliament on Tuesday, Great Britain's Labor government will face a series of tests any one of which, it is believed in some quarters, may result in overthrow of the government.

The battle is expected to start Wednesday over the government's education bill, now in committee stage. A religious controversy has entered into discussions on this measure, with the Catholic and Free Church elements in Commons at loggerheads over the question of grants to "non-provided" schools—that is, schools run independently by religious organizations.

It is believed in some quarters the government will withdraw the whole bill rather than risk defeat by attempting to pick its way through the pitfalls that surround the measure.

On Thursday a real major engagement is looked for with second reading of the trade disputes bill. Here fireworks of every description are anticipated, with the possibility of enough Liberals joining the Conservatives to cause the fall of the Labor government.

It is generaly thought, however, a vote will not be taken before the following Tuesday, although Thursday's debate should disclose sufficient evidence as to how the land lies. An indication of the possible final line-up may come even on the opening day of Commons, since the Liberal parliamentary party will meet then to consider its attitude toward the bill.

The conference has been called by the Bureau of Agricultural Economics of the Department of Agriculture. Study will be given to the current and prospective demand for farm products this year. In attendance at the conference will be research economists of the State agricultural experimental stations and farm management authorities from practically all State colleges of agriculture and extension services. The Federal Farm Board will be represented and practically the entire Washington personnel of the Bureau of Agricultural Economics will participate.

EXECUTIVES TABLE COMPENSATION PLAN

Lump-Sum Bonus Proposal Stirs Debate at 29th Division Meeting.

TO ACT IN SEPTEMBER

In a heated discussion over the question of adjusted compensation for World War Veterans, through which the bonus would be paid in a lump sum, resulted in the matter being tabled by the executive committee of the Twenty-ninth Division Association, at the closing session of a two-day meeting yesterday morning.

J. Fred Chase, president of Washington Post, No. 29, of the American Legion, spoke in favor of the compensation proposal. The main force of objection was brought by Herbert Blizzard, of New Jersey, who gave various reason why he thinks it would be unwise to release the bonus at this time. Those arguing in favor of the bonus called attention to the fact that Representative Harold Hoffman, of New Jersey, favors two-thirds of the money being released immediately.

The committee voted to hold the next convention at Asbury Park, N. J., during the latter part of September. Definite action on the bonus question will be taken at that time. Plans are being made to hold the 1932 convention in France. It will center around the memorial now being erected to the Twenty-ninth Division, at a cost of $2,000,000.

H. J. Lepper, of Newark, N. J., national commander of the association, presided at the executive committee meeting, which was attended by representatives from Maryland, Virginia, District of Columbia and New Jersey. Dudley Browne, local patent lawyer, together with Mr. Chase, represented the District. The meeting was held at the Arlington Hotel.

Official on Way to Panama Meeting.

C. W. James, of the Department of Agriculture, is on his way to attend the second meeting of the Inter-American Highway Commission, which will be held in Panama. The commission will consider further plans for a survey of the route of the inter-American highway between Panama and the United States. Mr. James is chief of the division of highway transport, Bureau of Public Roads.

GERMANS OBSERVE BIRTH OF EMPIRE

Impressive Ceremonies Are Held in Reichstag in Celebration of 1871.

AVOIDED BY RADICALS

Berlin, Jan. 18 (N.Y.W.N.S.).—The sixtieth anniversary of the proclamation of the German empire at Versailles in 1871 was commemorated here today with impressive ceremonies in the Reichstag, national legislature of the 13-year-old German republic.

All government buildings flew the national colors adopted at the Weimar congress in 1918, at which the republic was born. But with the exception of these buildings, comparatively few flags were seen anywhere, and these, save in rare instances, were the old black, white and red flags of the empire.

The Prussian government issued no orders for participation by the schools in the celebration. The press of all parties published commemorative articles, except the newspapers of the two radical parties. Voerwarts refers to the celebration of the "Bourgeoisie," and declares that there is no reason for Socialists to join in it. The Communist organ, Rote Fahne, follows suit.

National Socialist (Fascist) members of the Reichstag refused to join in its exercises because of the presence of the Defense Minister Wilhelm Groener and Minister of the Interior Dr. Josef Karl Wirth.

In Heidelberg the Student Union party refused to atend the celebration at the university because of the presence of Prof. Tumhell, a pacifist, who once declared that the war dead fell on "the field of dishonor." The students held their own celebration, but members of the university faculty refused invitations to join in it.

National Socialist students at Munich broke up a meeting of the Democratic Students Association with tear bombs. Some were arrested for crying, "Sow republic!"

Neuritis!

There is no pain like Neuritis. There is nothing quite so torturing—so utterly unbearable as Neuritis. It robs life of all joy—and makes people desperate. But Neuritis is not hopeless—it responds to proper treatment. A well-known physician has written us, "Have been drinking Mountain Valley Water for six weeks for Neuritis, and am feeling better than I have for two years." Mountain Valley Mineral Water from Hot Springs, Arkansas, brings relief in Neuritis because it gets at the root of the trouble—it tends to neutralize the acids which are irritating the nerves and retards the further accumulation of these acids by aiding healthy, normal elimination through the kidneys. Renew your hope—learn how Nature can help you. Phone for our booklet today. Met. 1062.

WILL ROGERS, one time the broadcasters' great problem, has at last learned the trick of staying before the microphone. After a long stage career, where he was allowed to roam the boards at liberty, Rogers found it difficult to stay in the vicinity of the "mike." We believe the series of broadcasts which he did last winter gave him the necessary training, because in the surprise radio appearance at the Press Club on Saturday evening, broadcast over WRC, he stood as steadily before the microphone as our most accomplished radio speakers.

Having talked along for several minutes, Rogers asked:

"Well, now, is that a radio going out everywhere?" pointing to the microphone.

Assured that it was, he continued: "Does it really go out? It really does. You never know; when you are talking to an audience and also talking into a radio, you don't know which one to favor. I think I had better play to the radio. They can't get at me."

Will Rogers and the microphone are well acquainted at last.

Washington is to be included in the tour of Roxy and His Gang, who will play here Thursday, February 5, in a benefit to aid the Walter Reed Hospital chapel fund.

ACCORDING to reports trickling through from Chicago, Amos 'n' Andy are spending a great deal of time poring over law books in the office of their attorney. Legal lights will thus probably not be able to find any technical errors in the conduct of the breach-of-promise suit which Madame Queen evidently intends instituting against Andy.

The Gondoliers—the Stoneberger brothers—have just begun their third year of continuous broadcasting from Station WJSV.

An all-Russian program will be played by the Symphony Orchestra, under the direction of Howard Barlow, for its concert tomorrow evening (WMAL, 9:30 p. m.).

After having spent a great deal of time and energy looking for a suitable signature song for his broadcasts, Morton Downey decided to have one written. Dave Dreyer, Jolson's collaborator, was called in, and "Wabash Moon" resulted.

A total of 35,662 miles of telephone circuit is used when a Nation-wide hook-up is on the air. In all, there are 173 relaying stations on the various chains.

More than 300 persons are required to maintain these circuits and to insure the accurate reproduction of national programs.

THE Cuckoo program is the only burlesque on broadcasting heard over the NBC networks.

Immediately following a recent astrological hour over WHK, in Cleveland, a feminine voice came over the phone:

"Could I speak to Evangeline Adams, please?"

Operator—"We're sorry, but she broadcasts from New York."

"Then Evangeline Adams doesn't live in Cleveland?"

"No."

"That's a shame. I wanted to ask her whether tomorrow would be a good day to get a permanent."

Dare INTERPRETS the MODE

Paris, Jan. 18.

NOW this is interesting! Fashionable women are breaking away from the one color idea. The coming spring and summer, then, will see something that we have not seen for a long time * * * the contrasting hat and coat, coat and dress.

There is relief in this idea, and danger. Relief because when chic demanded that everything match in a costume, the woman of limited means was liable to be confined to one or two complete ensembles. Danger, because so few women have color sense, and can wisely choose just the right color to harmonize with a coat or dress * * * and one that at the same time is flattering to her particular personal coloring.

Yet it is pleasant to be able to change one's costume with just a change of accessories. I have in mind Dupony-Magnin's favorite bottle green accessories with gray * * * chic, when your gray outfit sports only two other accessories in this green, but not smart when it shows three. This bottle green is chic also with yellow and chartreuse costumes. With the ever smart black one sees what one has not seen for some time * * * the mauve hat and gloves, or red gloves and scarf, or any bright shade of yellow, green or blue.

But just a touch, mind you! Two accessories, whether this be hat and gloves, or gloves and shoes, or gloves and bag, or shoes and scarf * * * that is all for chic. The rest of the costume must be all one color * * * although it may well be several shades of this one color.

* * * *

With Christmas safely over, and Easter yet to contemplate, now is the time for Clever Fingers to get those little things done for the house that she has had in the back of her mind for some time. That screen, for instance, that will keep the cold air from the open window from blowing directly upon one. There seems always to be a place where a screen is needed, or would be useful * * * so Dah-ray has made you a leaflet telling you how to make smart screens from wallpaper. Yes, and highly decorative ones, too * * * send your stamped, self-addressed envelope to the Dare Department of The Washington Post for the leaflet that tells you how to make them, and see for yourself.

* * * *

Something practical in spring ensembles is illustrated for you today * * * the black crepe coat, both boleroed and tiered, worn with a black crepe dress printed in a small red and white leaf design. The simple chic of the dress is the keynote of the clever woman's wardrobe * * * the dress that is smart without too much fuss. And then the coat can be a little bit fussier, you see!

* * * *

The little furless evening jacket that is a part of the gown is smarter than ever. Seems as though one wouldn't order a dress without its bolero jacket with long sleeves, or its little directoir jacket, of the same material. One's elaborate wrap goes on over the gown and jacket, too * * * but the jacket seems to be seldom removed. Comfort has something to do with this, I am sure.

* * * *

If you're reading Dare's weekly fashion letter each Sunday we know you're enjoying it. And if you haven't formed the habit, you should. It's in The Sunday Post.

Indoor and Outdoor Gardens

By JANE LESLIE KIFT

THE FRAGRANT FREESIA.

THE freesia is one of the most delightfully fragrant little flowers we have for house use, and it has much more than an alluring perfume to recommend it; it is easily grown and costs little. To grow bulbs in winter and not have freesias is to be without the sweetest of them all, for the fragrance of the freesia is subtle, never obnoxious.

While freesias are usually started in late summer there is no reason why they should not be started at this time. When starting them in midwinter you must, however, keep them in a light, cool place while the roots are developing, for you can not place them even in a protected cold frame. A sunny, semiheated garage is a good place for them for the first two weeks after planting.

Since these bulbs are very tiny, they do best in pans, which you know are really flower pots of a broad, rather low shape. Plant twelve bulbs in each pan. Use a soil composed of good loam, one-half part, and granulated peat moss and sharp sand, each one-fourth part.

After potting, instead of storing them in the dark, place the pans either in cold frames or directly outdoors until there is danger of freezing. As a rule, the freesias should be started in August or September. They should be grown rather cold, meaning that they will do better in a cold room than a warm one.

As soon as they are well rooted, feed them liberally with bone meal, or better still, liquid manure. As the foliage is grasslike and weak, the plants should be staked with small stakes, placed as near as possible to the edge of the pots.

The freesia Purity is a reliable variety. The colored variety, which are the reward for the most painstaking efforts on the part of the growers, are also worth while, as their colors are beautiful.

The root and top growths of the freesia start simultaneously and when the tops are an inch high the pots must be taken indoors and placed in the location where you want them to bloom. They like plenty of air, and failures frequently occur from lack of water, of which they should have an abundance while in growth. Any sunny place where the temperature is from 55 to 65 degrees will suit them.

After flowering, water must be withheld and the pots set in some sunny, cool place for the bulbs to ripen. In a week or two you can remove the bulbs and place them in a cool, dry place for planting another year.

All readers' questions on growing and care of indoor and outdoor flowers and floral decorations for social functions will be answered by Miss Kift, directly in this column if addressed in care of The Washington Post, or directly to readers if a self-addressed, stamped envelope is supplied.

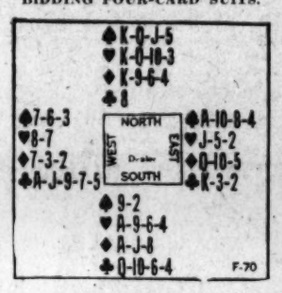
WORK ON BRIDGE

BIDDING FOUR-CARD SUITS.



With the above hand at Auction Bridge, South would bid one No Trump, and after West's pass North would bid two Spades. East would pass, and South would bid two No Trumps; but on North's next turn he would bid three Hearts, which would obtain the contract.

In Contract, dealer requires a count of 13 and second hand a count of 12 for an initial No Trump bid, while at Auction 11 with three suits stopped and a well-distributed hand is sufficient for either initial bidder; consequently, while South would bid one No Trump at Auction he would pass at Contract. West would pass, North would bid one Spade, and, after East's pass, South would bid two No Trumps. West would pass, North would bid three Hearts, and then South on his next turn would end the contracting by bidding four Hearts.

It will be noticed that if North allowed South to play a No Trump contract, West would lead a small Club, East would win with the King and return the Trey of Clubs, which West would win. Appreciating the importance of another Club lead through the South hand, West would make a successful attempt to put East in with a Spade, (a suit denied by South), with the result that East would win and lead a third Club, which would enable the adversaries to win six tricks.

With Hearts the contract, East would have great difficulty in determining which suit to lead; he has a close choice between opening a trump and a Club. An argument in favor of not leading trumps would be that West may have only two Spades and that Declarer, attempting a Spade ruff in dummy, may be over-ruffed. It would make no difference whether East decided that a Heart or a Club would be the least harmful original lead. Declarer would finesse Diamonds successfully and in the end would lose only one Spade and one Club, making one more than his contract.

Uncle Sam's Home Hints

CREAM PIE.

(Bureau of Home Economics.)

In some ways a cream pie is easier to make than a custard pie. The shell is baked first, the filling is made in the double boiler, and then a meringue is spread over the top and nicely browned. For "company" purposes a dessert with a meringue seems a little more attractive than just plain pie. The Bureau of Home Economics furnishes the recipe.

1 pint milk or thin cream.
4 tablespoons flour.
¼ cup sugar.
¼ teaspoon salt.
2 eggs.
2 tablespoons butter if milk is used.
½ teaspoon vanilla.
Pastry.

Heat the milk or cream in a double boiler. Mix the flour, sugar and salt thoroughly. Pour some of the hot liquids into this, mix well and return to the double boiler. Stir until thickened, cover and cook for fifteen minutes. Beat well. Pour some of this mixture into the beaten egg yolks, and add to the rest of the mixture with the butter and vanilla. Pour into a baked pie crust and let stand for a few minutes. In the meantime make a meringue from the beaten egg whites, 4 tablespoons sugar and a few grains of salt and a drop or two of vanilla. Spread over the pie filling to the edge of the crust and bake in a very moderate oven (325 degrees Fahrenheit) for fifteen or twenty minutes, or until slightly browned.

To make a banana cream pie, add sliced bananas to the custard mixture after it is cooked, cover with the meringue, and bake in the usual way.

Guiding Your Child

By MRS. AGNES LYNE.

Unfortunate Associations.

Parents and teachers both are frequently guilty of using as a punishment some act which is a necessary part of a child's education and wholesome living.

If one has said to a child, "You have been a bad, disobedient boy and I am going to put you to bed," it is not to be wondered at that going to bed at any time comes to be regarded by him as a form of exile and punishment, even when he is being put down for his nap or taken to bed at night.

A little girl who was frequently noisy about the house was punished by being compelled to memorize poetry. Her father was very proud of his choice of punishment, since it served at once as a means of keeping her quiet and of helping her to acquire familiarity with the classic poets. Unfortunately, its chief effect was to give her a permanent dislike for poetry of every kind.

Teachers in many schools still punish children by making them copy 100 or 500 times some maxim or resolution of improved behavior. The reminder of this tedious form of punishment may serve to check further misdeeds, but it will certainly inculcate a distaste for spelling and writing, an undesirable attitude certainly.

Punishment should be planned so as to cause no unfortunate associations in the child's mind with some action which is in itself desirable. As far as possible it should appear to him to be a reasonable consequence of wrongdoing, rather than an arbitrary dispensation of revenge by the grown-ups who control his destiny.

Wives of Tomorrow

FRANCES M'DONALD

Why Husbands Lie.

DEAR Frances McDonald: I am writing to you for advice because I want the unbiased opinion of a stranger. I will be as brief as possible.

We have been married only a few years, have a nice home, and our friends probably think us an ideal couple. We are both over 25. My husband is good and kind to me in many ways, and spends his evenings with me; but there is "a fly in the ointment." He has the borrowing and lending habit which keeps us always in debt.

Some time ago, without my knowledge, he borrowed a sum of money, and, when I learned of it I warned him that if he did so again I would leave him. He gave me his word of honor that it would not happen again. Well, it has, and I guess it is up to me to carry out my threat.

Is this a trivial thing for which to leave him? My love was built upon trust, and he has shattered that trust. I promised to honor—how can one honor a man who is not honorable? Marriage is supposed to be a partnership, but he would not treat a partner as he is treating his wife. No business partner would stand for the other partner borrowing and lending money without his knowledge or consent.

My husband is well liked by all who know him, but why won't a man give his wife a square deal?

I can not see any happiness for the future, with a cloud of debts hanging over us, and in the end a dependent old age or perhaps the poorhouse.

Since I can not trust him in money matters, I am beginning to doubt him in other ways. He is not always truthful, but I thought I could rely on his word of honor. He knows that debts drive me frantic, and if he loved me very much do you think he would run the risk of losing me by borrowing again? You see, I am not even sure of his love now.

What would you do in my case? There are no children and I am capable of supporting myself. Please answer this as soon as you can, through your column. FRANTIC.

Most men lie to avoid arguments, and they keep their affairs to themselves for the same reason. Your husband, like most men in moderate circumstances, finds himself in financial straits occasionally and uses his best judgment in extricating himself. If his judgment is poor, that is unfortunate, but by no means grounds for divorce.

Business men borrow money whenever they need it, and no one attaches any stigma to the transaction. It is a part of business. Your husband may so regard these loans. In any case, it is really his business and not yours. You would resent his counting the potatoes and inquiring as to the state of the larder. He would be interfering with your part of the family management. You are now interfering with his part. You are showing a lack of confidence in his ability to see himself out of his difficulties. This is one of the major crimes of marriage. And besides producing the tendency to lie, it will eventually undermine the man's pride and self-confidence.

In our humble opinion you should attend to your end of the business and let your husband's decisions stand or fall as he makes them. One of the most ghastly things about marriage is the lack of privacy entailed. In no other relation can an adult's every act be so subject to investigation by another. And it is fatal.

Talk over your affairs with your husband if you must, but stop undermining his sense of responsibility by censuring his administration of his finances.

Present your problem to this column. Read the problems of others and the solutions offered. It will help you to see things from the other person's point of view.

What Today Means to You

"CAPRICORN."

IF January 19 is your birthday, the best hours for you on this date are from 9 a. m. to 10:30 a. m., from 4 p. m. to 5:30 p. m. and from 10 p. m. to 11 p. m. The danger periods are from noon to 2 p. m., and from 6 p. m. to 7:15 p. m.

Events on this January 19, from an astrological standpoint, will not be without their quota of interesting and pleasing factors, you will experience some short-lived joys. Young people will fall under the spell of the little blind god, and engagements or marriages will follow.

The child born on this January 19 will be shy, and its parents should try to cure it of this bug-bear which may follow it with disastrous persistency through life. It will be miserable and self-conscious among a merry company, although when alone, it will mope. It will be happiest amongst its book companions.

If you were born on a January 19, you possess all the qualifications for making your mark, and the one thing that holds you back, is hesitation. Again and again, opportunity knocks at your door, but the knock is not answered quickly enough, and when you do open the door, the visitor, tired of waiting, has disappeared. You do not lack mental courage. You just cannot make up your mind speedily enough to take advantage of circumstances.

You are industrious, intelligent and worthy of confidence. Your vision is wonderful, but you take so long to act on your hunches that few of your dreams come true. You are an omnivorous reader, and have a retentive memory. Consequently your conversation, and you possess the gift of expression in a high degree, is always entertaining and instructive. In some of your ways, and in many of your thoughts, you are old-fashioned. This, however, does not militate against you, and is often a source of refreshing pleasure to your friends.

You abominate scandal and gossip, and never speak ill of either foe or friend, and you are considered a good counselor. Not only is your advice always sound, but you have wide sympathies and great tolerance, as well as patience. Your home life will radiate at all times harmony and happiness, even though it may not be surrounded with all the evidences of material prosperity.

Successful people born January 19:

1. Pierre Choteau, founder of Kansas City, Mo.
2. Robert E. Lee, Confedsrate general.
3. Edgar Allan Poe, poet.
4. David Starr Jordan, president Leland Stanford Junior University.
5. Maurice Arnold (M. Arnold Strothotte), composer.

The Life Story of Gen. Wood

By HERMANN HAGEDORN

XVI—TRIUMPH OVER FEVER.

All the phenomena of American politics, major and minor, flashed around Gen. Wood in Havana. That ubiquitous institution, the Irish contractor, who with his influence," his geniality and his conception of political morality played so large a part in American municipal politics, was not absent. As far back as 1895 a certain Michael J. Dady, of Brooklyn, had made a contract with the municipality of Havana for the sewering and paving the city. Matters moved with majestic deliberation under Spanish rule and the contract was still awaiting the approval of the captain general when the Americans took control.

Gen. Wood felt the urgent necessity of installing a sewage system, but the military engineers and the sanitary officers alike officially disapproved Dady's plans. It was impossible, however to brush aside the able and crafty Irishman. He had the advantage of a contract and, whatever the causes, a strong measure of Cuban support. By expending extensive sums on the preparation of estimates, he had acquired a toe-hold, known, under the Spanish law, as the right of anteo.

Under this privilege a contractor who had been sufficiently interested to make special studies in advance had—on the theory that initiative and enterprise deserved a special reward—the right either to take the contract himself on the terms of the next lowest bidder or to make that bidder pay him a certain percentage of the difference between his bid and that of the privileged insider.

Urgent Appeals Come.

From Washington — though not from the Secretary of War—came urgent appeals to handle Mr. Dady with care. Dady was mighty in the counsels of the Republican party in Brooklyn and had both subtle and vociferous friends.

So strong was the pressure on Wood by prominent Republican politicians to give Dady the contract practically on Dady's own terms, that Wood found it necessary to explain to the President his emphatic reasons for disapproving of the Dady plan.

Dady had his comic aspects but they lost in the heavy atmosphere of Havana, whatever humor they might have had in Mr. Dady's native air. The little game of contracts and pull which Brooklyn might find merely an instructive instance of democracy in adolescence, was in Havana a dance of death. In 25,000 sinks and cesspools, the plagues of the world had their breeding places; malaria, typhoid, typhus, yellow fever.

Menaced by Yellow Fever.

In Havana, as in Santiago, the menace of yellow fever hung black. For the first year of the American occupation there had been comparatively few cases, rather less than for many years previous; and the Americans proudly scored one more victory for the scouring brush and chloride of lime. The theory that filth was the origin of yellow fever had, however, received a shock in Gen. Wood's mind when the epidemic broke out in Santiago after a year of such cleansing and scrubbing as no city in the world had ever experienced before.

Wood, thoroughly baffled, appointed Maj. William C. Gorgas chief sanitary officer of Havana and gave him ample funds; urged Sternberg, the surgeon general of the Army, to appoint a especial scientific commission to study the problem of the origin of yellow fever; kept the streets spotless and labored for the obvious and immediate need, a decent method of sewage disposal.

Even if it should prove that modern sanitation left yellow fever unaffected, there was no question of its relation to Havana's other scourge, typhoid. There was subject for sardonic comment in the fact that it was Americans, men of the President's own party, proud of their leadership in international altruism and in all matters relating to sanitation and the relief of suffering, who made it possible for an individual Irishman in pursuit of personal gain to stand across Wood's path.

Commission Head Arrives.

On June 25, 1900, the chairman of the commission which Sternberg has appointed arrives in Havana. Walter Reed is a major in the Medical Corps, but heart and soul a scientist, indefatigable and self-effacing; tall, slender, with reddish hair parted in the middle, a mustache that droops over a firm, expressive mouth and eyes so beautiful that men remember them as they do a woman's. One of his assistants on the commission, Dr. James Carroll, comes with him; the other two, Dr. Aristides Agramonte and Dr. Jesse W. Lazear, already are in Havana. Wood gives them quarters and laboratory space near the Army Hospital at Camp Columbia, just outside the city.

After months of vain experimentation and research, the Yellow Fever Board turned at last to the theory of Dr. Carlos J. Finlay, of Havana, that yellow fever was transmitted by the bites of the stegomyia mosquito.

The discovery that malaria was transmitted by the bite of a mosquito and one or two small and apparently unrelated discoveries concerning the time element in the infection deepened Reed's interest in the theory. "It sounds more possible than anything we have tried," Reed said. "The thing to do is to see whether we can eliminate it or not."

Recalled to Washington.

He himself was recalled to the United States, but he had mapped the campaign in advance. In Washington, he saw Sternberg and told him that his board was trying out Finlay's mosquito theory. The surgeon general was entirely skeptical. "You can try it if you want to," he said, "but there is nothing in it."

A month of experimentation, indeed, brought no results. Members of the commission subjected themselves to the bite of mosquitoes supposed to be infected, and when they suffered no ill effects began to lose faith in Finlay's theory. But the middle of September, Dr. Lazear was bitten and taken ill, and died the following week, a martyr to the cause.

He had left voluminous notes, detailed and accurate, giving the individual history of each of the mosquitoes he had studied. Out of his researches emerged for his heroic survivors the gradual apprehension of two traps. The first was that the yellow fever patient ceased to have the infected agent in his blood after the third day of the disease and could not infect mosquitoes after that time.

Incubation Needed.

The second trap was that, after the mosquito had bitten a case of yellow fever, even during the first three days, he became able to infect only after a period of incubation of twelve to fourteen days. Since yellow fever in the first three days was much like malaria and other fevers, revealing the characteristic yellow tinge only on the third day, it was natural for the experimenter to take his mosquito to a well-marked case more than three days old. Thus he fell into the first trap. If by good luck he escaped it, bringing the mosquito to be infected in contact with a patient still capable of giving infection, he generally took his insect to the subject of experimentation with the least possible delay, since mosquitoes in jars were likely to die, and thereby fell into the second trap.

With Lazear's death, the experiments for the moment came to an end.

Wood, who had kept in touch with the experiments, was convinced, however, that the problem had been solved. On October 9—his fortieth birthday—he gave a dinner to the members of his staff. "I have a most important thing to tell you," he said. "We have got at the cause of yellow fever. That achievement is going to be of more importance to Cuba and to the rest of the world than anything else we could possibly do here. We are going to rid Cuba of yellow fever. But we are going to do even more. We are going to make it certain that at the end of five years there will be practically no yellow fever left anywhere in the world."

More Experiments Necessary.

Reed returned to Cuba early in October and saw that he was at last on the right track. He recognized, however, that he still had far to go. What next? All efforts to infect laboratory animals had failed. More experiments on human beings were necessary or the whole hopeful enterprise would collapse. He decided to return at once to the United States to ask the Surgeon General for permission to undertake the experiments, and funds to carry them forward. The prospect was not promising. The Surgeon General, obsessed with the theory that contagion or some miasma was responsible for yellow fever, was known to regard any researches in pursuit of Finlay's theory as wasted effort, and could be counted on to declare with emphasis that in the death of Lazear too high a price already had been paid in an experiment barren of hope.

Dr. Jefferson R. Kean, who had been assisting the board in its researches, suggested to Reed an appeal to Wood, and himself took Reed to the palace. With a sense that here was history in the making, Kean watched the surgeon and the governor as they stood in the embrasure of a window looking out on the Plaza de las Armas. Between them he could see Morro Castle and the blue waters of the harbor and the ancient fort, La Fuerza, built by De Soto before he sailed northward to find the Mississippi—a romantic setting for two Americans on an enterprise amid high peaks and wide horizons. The two men offered a singular contrast—Wood, powerful, leonine, impassive; Reed, slender, alert, with blue eyes that sparkled as he summed up the evidence. He needed funds, he said, to pay healthy men to subject themselves to experimentation. "Gen. Wood, will you give me $10,000?"

Reply Comes on Instant.

Wood's answer came instantly. "I have this morning signed a warrant for that amount to aid the police in the capture of criminals. This work is of more importance to Cuba than the capture of a few thieves. I will give you $10,000, and if that proves insufficient I will give you $10,000 more."

With a recollection, perhaps, of his own experience in the Boston City Hospital he cautioned Reed to make the experiments only on sound persons of full legal age, who understood the risk and accepted it in writing; and in case he used Spaniards to get the consent of the Spanish consul. Beyond that, he added, the military government would assume responsibility.

The money Wood put at Reed's disposal was important, but the support he offered was invaluable. No other officer in Cuba, Kean said to Michie, Fitzhugh Lee's adjutant general, would have given it. The issue was too full of shadowy perils. Another would have passed it on to the surgeon general to receive from Sternberg's stubborn certainty the emphatic negation which would have stopped the experiments then and there. It became apparent promptly, however, that Reed needed some one to keep the earnest and uninformed off his shoulders while he was doing his work. La Discusion got wind of the fact that experiments were being made on Spanish immigrants and attacked Wood violently. A major of artillery, one of whose men had volunteered to subject himself to experimentation, wrote a harsh protest demanding that this thing be stopped. Wood quieted him.

Meanwhile, Dady's sewer remained as far as ever from translation out of the field of politics into the field of construction. The negotiations had all the suspense, the sudden reversals, of romantic drama.

Dady's Persuasiveness Wins.

Dady stood his ground. Root had described his Havana representative as "a persuasive little cuss." Concerning his powers of persuasion, there seemed to be no question. The municipal council of Havana one week voted 13 to 5 to disregard Dady's project entirely, and the next week voted 17 to 5 to approve it. Here, truly, was persuasion with a vengeance. But Lemuel Quigg, Dady's attorney, put his client's triumph with the city council on loftier grounds. With a delicious lack of humor, he wrote the Secretary of War: "As has always been the case, so soon as Mr. Dady got into the hands of lawyers, he was safe."

A new factor now entered the situation. The city council definitely made up its mind that the Irishman had the right of tanteo.

Late in January, therefore, Wood, with the approval of his Cuban cabinet, came to an agreement with Dady to pay him $250,000—less than one-half what his secretary of public works had awarded—for all Dady's claims against the island. A quarter of a million to get out of the way so that Havana might be purged. "But I have the $250,000 in my pocket," said the politician-contractor.

Experiments Are Ended.

It was noteworthy that while one American individual was getting his pound of flesh out of the desperate need of the stricken city another was bringing to a triumphant conclusion experiments which were to lift forever the shadow of the plague. Point by point, Walter Reed, in the camp at Quemados, which he had established from the funds Wood had given him, had proved not only that yellow fever was transmitted by the bite of the stegomya mosquito but that it was transmitted by no other agency. Americans and Spaniards had lent themselves to the experiment, worn the clothes of men who had died of yellow fever, slept in their filthy bedding. Twice indeed the investigation had nearly been stopped by orders from the surgeon general, who needed his doctors and felt that too much time had already been wasted. But each time Wood had intervened and saved the commission. And now the work was complete. The theory Finlay had divined but could not prove was proved beyond disputing.

The mystery was solved; what remained was a fight in the open against an enemy who lost all his terror once he stood revealed. The methods of annihilating mosquitoes were known; and early in March, 1901, Gorgas began the war of extinction.

HOW IT BEGAN

By Russ Murphy and Roy Sarnasky

To Talk Turkey . . .

There is an old colonial story about a colonist and an Indian who went hunting together. They killed a buzzard and a turkey. The white man said, "You take the buzzard and I'll take the turkey." The Indian replied, "Huh! White man must talk turkey to Indian." The popularity of this old story gave us the expression.

Salt of the Earth . .

In ancient times salt was exceedingly rare and valuable because only crude methods were available for mining it. So it became common to use this metaphor in speaking of friends who were highly regarded.

The Question Mark

When you ask someone a question, you listen attentively for an answer. Some ingenious old printer observed this and conceived the idea of a question mark by putting an outline of the human ear over a period.

Hollywood Screen Life

By HUBBARD KEAVY.

Hollywood—A criticism of "Outward Bound" that was heard here will be a general one. The story, which deals with the greatest of all mysteries, death, will at first be somewhat perplexing to every spectator because the presence of the characters on a ghost-like vessel is not immediately explained.

HELEN CHANDLER

Further confusion results because two of the players resemble each other so much. They are Leslie Howard and Douglas Fairbanks, jr.

"Outward Bound" is a film that required courage to make. While excellently acted and directed, it deals with such a subject as never would make typical movie entertainment.

It gives a new and rather startling conception of life after death, the view of its author, Sutton Vane.

The cast, individually and collectively, is one of the best ever assembled for a picture. It includes, besides Howard and Fairbanks, Montagu Love, Alec B. Francis, Beryl Mercer and Helen Chandler. It is Miss Chandler's first opportunity to show her talents.

Warners do not expect to make much money on "Outward Bound." It is intended as one of those infrequent contributions to the art of the cinema, and a very good one it is, too.

Tricks in Names.

Entertaining motion pictures don't need come-on titles, but as long as poor pictures are made there will be some one to think up alluring names for them.

Movies, books and plays are being given alluring titles, but often, every one has discovered, the name is a desperate attempt to make up for a lack of ideas.

I know nothing about the quality of "Women Like Men," but the name certainly is a tricky one. Two other titles in the same class are "Strangers May Kiss" and "Broad-Minded."

The value of sexy movie titles was discovered 'way back in 1913, when "Traffic in Souls," a picture based on a New York crime survey, grossed the then huge sum of $450,000. A wave of such titles followed.

No More Silence.

After listening to talking pictures for two years, one conclusion is that they are here to stay because the inarticulateness of printed subtitles would never again be satisfactory. Chaplin alone seems destined to get away with silence.

YOUR NAME — WHAT DOES IT MEAN?

By HARRY A. DEFERRARI, Ph. D.

The family name "Turner" has come down to us from several sources. In the great majority of cases it has the obvious meaning of "the lathe-worker," and indicates the occupation of the persons who were first so called. It is one of the oldest English family names. Its French equivalent forms are "Tourneur," "Letourneur" and "Le Tourneur," all of which have been very common in France since early times. Another source of both the English and French forms of this name is the place called "Le Tourneur," in Calvados, Normandy. This place was probably so called because it contained the workshop of a well-known lathe-worker. A person who once had lived in this place and who moved away might well have adopted its name as his own. If such a person went to England the name would very probably soon be changed to "Turner." It has been found that in some cases "Turner" is derived from the French "Tournier," which means "the champion of the tournament." There is a popular belief that still another source of this name is the French "tour noire," meaning "the black tower," but there is not the slightest proof of such an origin. The Hundred Rolls, the famous thirteenth century list of English names, mentions a certain Aylbricht le Turnur, a Goeffrey le Turner and a William le Turnor. This name was brought to Ireland by English families at a very early date. A certain William Turnur and an Osbert Turnur are known to have been living in Dublin in 1226.

The family name "Heckert" is a modern form of the Germanic "Hechard." "Hechard" was an old personal name which may be translated "firm hedge."

BEWARE THE COUGH FROM COLDS THAT HANG ON

Coughs from colds may lead to serious trouble. You can stop them now with Creomulsion, an emulsified creosote that is pleasant to take. Creomulsion is a medical discovery with two-fold action; it soothes and heals the inflamed membranes and inhibits germ growth.

Of all known drugs creosote is recognized by high medical authorities as one of the greatest healing agencies for coughs from colds and bronchial irritations. Creomulsion contains, in addition to creosote, other healing elements which soothe and heal the inflamed membranes and stop the irritation, while the creosote goes on to the stomach, is absorbed into the blood, attacks the seat of the trouble and checks the growth of the germs.

Creomulsion is guaranteed satisfactory in the treatment of coughs from colds, bronchitis and minor forms of bronchial irritations, and is excellent for building up the system after colds or flu. Money refunded if not relieved after taking according to directions. Ask your druggist. (adv.)

The District Commissioners yesterday advised the Board of Education that they have on hand a credit of $176.50 as part of the Galt fund for deserving pupils.

The military secretary has been advised by telegram from the commanding general, Department of California, that the transport Sherman has arrived at San Francisco from Manila with the Twenty-second Infantry.

At the reception tonight in honor of the judiciary, carriages will approach from the north to the east entrance of the White House opposite the Treasury. Pedestrians will follow the same route. After discharging passengers, carriages will be parked around the Ellipse in the White lot.

HOW TO KEEP WELL

By DR. W. A. EVANS

MENTAL HYGIENE.

A NEW YORK commission on mental hygiene of school children have worked out a series of questions for the children to answer. Among the questions are the following:

Do you study for competent knowledge of each day's assignment, or do you follow one of three defective practices:

a. Neglecting some lessons.
b. Studying all inadequately.
c. Neglecting all.

Are you intellectually curious—that is, are you often interested enough to discover more than your lessons require, or do you study only what is required of you?

Do you concentrate intently when studying, or is your study often interrupted by day dreaming or other distractions?

Do you study in a quiet, undisturbed place, or do you study where family interruptions or outside noises tend to interfere?

Do you prepare your lessons written or otherwise by yourself, or do you usually or often depend on getting material from friends?

Do you make use of odd time, as on the way to school or at the start of a period for reviewing special lesson points, or do you waste odd moments?

Do you take down your home assignments or do you trust to memory?

Do you have some favorite hobby, or are you at a loss to use your free time to advantage?

Do you have an hour or more out of doors every day, or do you spend all your free time inside?

Do you continuously take part in different athletic sports?

When recreations or other activities conflict with studies, do you study first, or do you play first and try to get the studying later?

Do your outside activities tend to improve your personality or are they principally concerned with increasing your pleasures?

Are your friends and companions mostly of a sort whom you can respect and admire, or are they frivolous and purposeless?

Do you have time enough for breakfast, or do you have to bolt your food?

Does your breakfast include well selected items (a balanced diet), or is it poorly selected or insufficient?

Are you usually on time in keeping appointments, or do people have to wait for you?

Do you arise in time to follow a set routine before school, or are you hurried, and is the program carried out haphazard?

By means of the answers to these and other questions the teachers lay the foundation for an estimate of the pupil's mental capacity, his mental type, and his training. They build on this foundation, not only in teaching book learning, but in putting the child into society.

GOLDEN BEATS VON ELM BY 4 STROKES IN PLAY-OFF

Westbrook Pegler Says

NEW YORK, Jan. 16.—What sort of mail does Prof. Albert Einstein receive and can it touch upon topics as important as those which are dealt with in mine and as thoughtfully? I have a letter, for instance, denouncing the nightshirt manufacturers for reducing the size of the handkerchief pocket and demanding an expose.

"My pocket is so small that my handkerchief forms a hard knob, and when I roll on it I wake up," the complaint sets forth. "If I sleep on my back I snore and wake myself up, and if I leave my handkerchief out of my pocket it gets lost among the sheets and I have to get up and get another one. I have lost so much sleep that I am going crazy and all because some trust decided to economize on handkerchief pockets."

Another note, from Ray C. Alvis, Chicago, says: "Bearcat Wright, the colored heavyweight champion of the world, is on a rampage. He recently boxed George Godfrey in Atlanta, Ga., and although the referee called the fight a draw——"

Mr. Alvis goes on to imply that some injustice was done to Bearcat Wright, which I would not doubt, since he says so.

EVERYTHING DENOUNCED BY ONE

A correspondent in Richfield, N. J., takes a gloomy view of practically everything and doesn't even ask for an expose, not believing it would do any good.

Says he: "All this talk of overemphas — overemfa — whatever the complicated system of symbols happens to be, about football. It seems like nothing but a lot of ostentatious wordage to me. The whole world is nothing but a damn racket, anyway. Do they (meaning whoever) expect that football is going to prove the exception? Fathers have always subsidized athletes, and my suggestion is to kill off all fathers and potential fathers if they (meaning them) really want to de-emfe — de-em — Oh, hell! football, and possibly everything else, which wouldn't be so bad at that. Nothing is any good and trusting that you are the same."

My next is from Patrick Sullivan, of South Bend, Ind., defending Knute Rockne against that conspiracy of silence which virtually banished his name from the newspapers during the recent football season.

"Why is it?" Mr. Sullivan demands. "Is it because this man Rockne turns out better teams than any one else with the material he happens to have on hand? Rockne modestly refrained from attending the conference of the coaches in New York to avoid dominating the meeting and the rules committee and shaming the educators with his wit. Just because he conducts tours to Europe, writes for papers and magazines, talks on the air, conducts coaching schools and is a broker, some foolish people (and small-minded, too.—Ed.) think he is mercenary. This is not so. It is his simple desire to reach the masses of people who wish to hear him and know him. (Unlike Will Rogers, the cowboy philanthropist. —Ed.)

NAME ADDS PRESTIGE, HE SAYS

"Rockne is one of the best professors of chemistry, and the Rockefeller Foundation and the Mayo Clinic have been anxious to secure his services at a very large salary, figuring that his name would add prestige to their institutions. There is not the least doubt in the world that the Mayo clinic gained prestige by his visit there. (If he could only be induced to visit the White House, the Vatican or Westminster Abbey.—Ed.)

"What a gain to football, if such good coaches as Tad Jones, Kerr, Hawley, Sasse, Ingram, Bezdek, Steffen, Roper, Stagg, Zuppke, Yost, Hanley, Alexander, Warner and so forth would elect Knute K. Rockne as their mentor and master. Join the millions of brainy people and pay homage to this coach."

There is a constructive suggestion, Mr. Rockne should not be suppressed in the newspapers.

Now comes news of a great-hearted prize fighter who used to fight for charity at the drop of a hat for 40 per cent of the gross. His manager died in reduced circumstances.

"No word came from our gladiator and no flowers were seen," a mutual friend of them writes, "although, as we, of course, know, he is quite rich. The first any one heard from him was

C. U. to Battle American Tonight

Game Stands Alone on Collegiate Program for District.

Eagles Favored Over In-and-Out Group of Cardinals.

THE lone college basket ball game of the night features a clash between Catholic and American Universities at C. U.'s immense gymnasium to be staged at 8:30 o'clock.

Catholic University has had its most hectic season in years on the basket ball floor this year. Starting off with a convincing 39-to-19 victory over Maryland State Normal, the Cardinals ran into a holocaust of setbacks, losing to Rider at Trenton by the score 44 to 25; to Manhattan at New York, 39 to 24; to the Knights of Columbus at New York, 28 to 27; to Benjamin Franklin, 21 to 19, and to Geneva, 24 to 23.

Then when it was doped to lose its sixth straight game—to George Washington—it came through to defeat the Colonials in the big upset of the season. Continuing this metamorphosed strain, it downed Duquesne last Thursday night by the score of 29 to 24. Duquesne, with one of the best teams in the East, had loafed through to a victory over American Wednesday night and subsequently beat Georgetown, 32 to 28.

The Cardinals have a rocky path ahead, meeting all of their early season assailants during the ensuing thirteen games.

Cardinals Are Good And Bad in Spots.

Chick Gagnon has assembled an odd assortment of players to wear the Black and Red this year. There are times when for sheer raggedness and almost total lack of shooting ability they can hardly be touched, and then, conversely enough, there are other times when everything works, best of all Buster Sheary's pot shots for the quarter of the court.

Most of C. U.'s credit belongs to Sheary and Johnny Oliver, who are just now blossoming into all-court performers. Sheary has shown an improved eye of late and has not gone back a bit in his ball hawking, and Oliver's guarding work and general aggressiveness have gone far to make C. U. a snappy team.

Nevertheless, there remains a good chance that American U. will return victor tonight. It is a more even aggregation of basketers than Catholic. It is less liable to blow up and less liable to get "hot-handed." Perhaps the fact that it is the under dog will stand in American's favor tonight. Very possibly, C. U. may not be able to stand this prosperity which has been theirs of late.

"Houdini of Water" In Exhibition Tonight

A strait-jacket escape in the water will feature an exhibition of swimming which will be presented tonight at the Ambassador Hotel pool by William F. Goll, known as the Houdini of the water, and winner of third place in the 1930 Toronto 15-mile swim. The exhibition will start at 8 o'clock.

Goll is holder of several professional swimming championships, chief of which is world's professional medley title. He is nationally known as a swimming instructor and has placed in many important marathons.

Hack Wilson to Seek $40,000, Friends Say

Chicago, Jan. 18 (A.P.).—Hack Wilson has confided to friends that he will demand a $40,000 salary to rap out home runs for the Cubs in the 1931 season.

The pudgy center fielder, who crashed out 56 home runs last year to dethrone Babe Ruth as the home run king of the majors, received $22,500 last year but he said he believed he was worth at least half the salary the Bambino is reported to receive for the same art with the New York Yankees.

President William Veeck of the Cubs hasn't grown very excited about the matter as yet, but probably will attempt to arbitrarte around the $30,000 mark.

R-101 Survivor Gets Chance to Risk Life

Cardington, England, Jan. 18 (A.P.).—H. J. Leech, one of the handful that escaped in the R-101 disaster, is to risk his life again, voluntarily.

He is to be Capt. Malcolm Campbell's mechanic in February when he tries for a new world speed record at Daytona Beach, a job he sought.

Leech was chief engineer on the R-101 and was awarded hte Albert medal for his gallantry at the time of the crash.

LAYTON AIMS FOR FOURTH CUE TITLE

Victory in Play Starting Today Would Set Record.

CHICAGO, Jan. 18 (A.P.).—Johnny Layton, the imperturbable one, will attempt to write new billiard history this week by capturing his fourth straight world's three-cushion championship, an achievement never before accomplished in sanctioned tournament competition.

The Sedalia, Mo., redhead, noted for his steadiness under the fire and strain of the nerve-wracking game, will be opposed by seven of the leading three-cushion artists of the United States over a route extending 28 games and 11 days and nights, but he was an adds-on favorite to win.

If he can repeat again, he will beat the former record for championship longevity, as only he and the veteran Cuban, Alfred de Oro, were successful in gaining the crown three times straight in tournament play.

Layton will open the tournament at Bensinger's Congress billiard room tomorrow night by meeting F. S. Scoville, the Eastern sectional champion from Buffalb, who has been playing three-cushion for 30 years, but who has never before competed in a world's tournament. The match, the only one of the evening, will be a 50-point affair like all the rest of the tournament.

Other Pairings Listed.

Other first match pairings are Tiff Denton, former world's champion from Kansas City, vs. Arthur Thurnblad, of Chicago, Northern sectional champion; Allen Hall, Chicago, third place winner in the 1930 championship, vs. D. J. Jacobs, St. Louis, Southern sectional champion; Otto Reiselt, Philadelphia, former world's champion, vs. Charles E. Jordan, Los Angeles, Western sectional champion.

There still was some doubt tonight, however, whether Jordan would be able to compete because of his illness. The tournament committee advised him that it would defer his opening match until Wednesday or Thursday, so as to give him every opportunity to play.

More than $20,000 will be distributed among the players, the winner receiving a salary of $6,000 a year, $1,200 in cash and 16 per cent of the net receipts. The runner-up will receive $3,000 in salary, $1,000 in cash and 15 per cent of the net receipts. The others will receive cash ranging from $800 to $300 and a share of the receipts ranging from 14 per cent to 9 per cent.

The double referee system will be in effect with Herbert Levis and Charles McElligott, both of Chicago, officiating.

$20,000 French Chase Landed by Ginger Ale

Nice, France, Jan. 18 (A.P.).—Baron Eduard de Rothschild, reputed the wealthiest owner campaigning on Riviera tracks, scored another victory today when his Ginger Ale easily captured the Grand Prix Steeplechase of the City of Nice from ten starters.

Ginger Ale, which won the Grand Prix de Monaco last Sunday, won by three lengths from Monsieur Le Marchal, with Acadryos third.

The race was over a three miles and three furlongs course and worth $20,000. Ginger Ale paid 3 to 1. He is a 4-year-old by La Farina out of Sweet Gin.

G. P. O. MANAGERS, NOTICE!

Post's Soccer Trophy to Rosedale

Capital City League's Title Annexed by 6-1 Victory.

Silver Spring Victim; Rockville Forfeits to Soldiers.

THE Rosedale Soccer Club won the championship of the Capital City League yesterday when it defeated the Silver Spring eleven, 6 to 1. Rockville, the only team having a chance to overtake the Northeast lads before yesterday's game, forfeited to Army. Rosedale now has 12 points in the official standing and Rockville has 9.

The latter club has completed its schedule and should the former lose all of its remaining games the standing would remain unchanged. Rosedale will receive The Washington Post trophy for its reward.

The luckless Silver Spring team crumbled before Rosedale's determined attack in the first half yesterday and as a result the cellar occupants of the league received their first defeat in a league game by more than two points. Being forewarned that the Springers should not be held too lightly, the champions started with the opening whistle as if they were playing for the championship of the world and as a result at the end of the first half they led 5 to 0.

Exhibit Brilliant Passing.

Having the game in the bag safely at the start of the final 45 minutes of play the former elementary school title holders put on a passing game that amazed some of the old country spectators who did not realize that the American boys had learned this phase of the game. Heretofore, Rosedale has depended largely on a kick and rush game for its conquests.

Having little to look at, save the powerful shooting of Henry Irving and the clever footwork of Joe Bennett and Harding, the 400 or more fans who visited Brook Grubb's Georgia Avenue Park stood around on the damp field in the soccer atmosphere and discussed next Sunday's game between Marlboro and Washington Concord for the championship of Washington and the South. Final arrangements for the game will be made at an association meeting tomorrow night in the playground office.

Texas Town to Sponsor $3,500 Open Tourney

Harlingen, Tex., Jan. 18 (A.P.).—An 18-hole municipal course, completed here last year at a cost of $140,000, will be the scene of a winter golf event February 5 to 9—the Harlingen open.

Professional golfers on their annual transcontinental trek will tramp over its 6,200 yards of fairways and explore some of its 300 sand traps and hazards.

A purse of $3,500 has been underwritten for the meet.

J. C. C. Beats Soldiers For Seventh Straight

Jewish Community Center tossers almost doubled the score on the Fort Myer quintet last night, when they trounced the Soldiers, 45 to 23, in the Center gym for their seventh straight victory.

Hirsch, star forward of the winners, led both teams in scoring, with six field goals and one foul to his credit. Lester, rangy center, with four double-deckers and two fouls, was close behind his teammate, while Farrell, of the Soldiers, likewise counted 10 points.

Weissmuller Played Truant To Become Record Swimmer

Tank Star, Now Pro, Talks Between Dips at Shoreham.

By BOB CONSIDINE.

A GENIAL young giant swam through the green water of the Shoreham's Venetian Pool yesterday afternoon, sometimes using but his world-wide-known legs to propel him with effortless speed, and sometimes using but his giant shoulders and arms to promote the same motivation during his exhibition.

After a while, Johnny Weissmuller, bronzed and dripping and the greatest name in American swimming history, pulled himself up out of the water and remarked that he was hungry again. The writer thought that was a rather small-time lead for an interview with the holder of 50-odd national and world's records—none of which have been broken since he did one of those inimitable flat dives into professionalism's pool.

IF you want to know how much of a stunt it is to hold a basket ball in each hand, palms downward, try it yourself—or find, if you can, some one whose hands are as big as William Johnson's. He believes he has the largest hands of any basket ball center in the country.

• • • •

When a hunter near Seattle, Wash., brought down the green-wing teal, he found it tagged and dated. It had left the New Jersey State Game Farm at Forked River five days before—a great deal of speed for one going to death!

• • • •

The Koala looks so much like a teddy bear you'd think the toys were designed after him—but they weren't, which makes it odd. The Koala lives in the tops of trees, rarely descending to the ground; his fur is thick and soft. The young are carried in a pouch very much like the kangaroos.

EAGLES BEAT STAMFORD QUINTET

Bennie Is Leader in 32-21 Triumph; Stewarts Win.

By JOHN V. HINKEL.

PILING up a 15-point lead in the first half, Skinker Brother Eagles coasted along to their fourth consecutive triumph over a visiting road club yesterday afternoon by handily defeating the Connecticut Yankee, of Stamford, Connecticut, 32 to 21, before more than than 450 persons at the Silver Spring Armory.

Led by Johnny Dunn, former Georgetown University athlete, the Yankees, after a miserable first half in which they scored only four points, rallied in the second to carry the fight all the way to their hosts. The visitors counted 10 points in the first few minutes of this second session to pull up within five points of the Eagles.

Ralph Bennie, Skinker guard, then went on an individual scoring rampage, sinking three field goals and a foul, which, together with a single double-decker by Joe Sweeney, made the score 28 to 18 in favor of the District team.

Bennie Shows Way To Scorers.

Bennie's five two-pointers and one foul gave him high scoring honors, with Jakie Goldblatt right on his

Tigers Get Brothers From the Same Team And at Same Time

MANY famous brother combinations have left their mark on baseball history, but the Walker boys—Harvey and Gerald—who will try out with the Detroit Tigers this spring, enjoy a distinction none of the others have achieved. They are first brothers coming into the big leagues to the same team at the same time from the same minor league club.

Evansville, Ind., in the Three-I League, sent the duo up. Both Harvey and Gerald burned up that loop last season, and the latter might have set a world's record for stolen bases had he not fractured a bone in his leg after playing just a few games past half of the schedule. As it was, he stole 50 bases in 84 games, and was caught stealing only five times. Shortly before he was forced out of the game by his injury on July 4, Gerald made eight hits and stole six bases against Springfield. Harvey is no tortoise on the bases either, as he was credited with 37 steals last season.

Alexander Pantages Sets Record in Mexico

Agua Caliente, Mexico, Jan. 18 (A. P.).—Alexander Pantages, running in the colors of Rodney and Lloyd Pantages, won the San Diego Handicap by 3¼ lengths here today. The time for the mile and a sixteenth was 1:43:10, a new track record. The old record of 1:44 was held by Andromeda. The metric system of timing is used at the track.

Knight's Call, owned by the Audley Farm Stable, was second, and Up, running for Mrs. J. N. Crofton, a close third. Caruso, Good and Hot, Nellie Custis, Vanity, Ervast and St. Prisca finished in order.

After a delay of two minutes at the post, the field was off to a perfect start. Ervast, the hope of Baron Long, went to the fore almost immediately and cut out a dazzling pace in the early part. Up followed close on the heels of the Long runner, and took the lead when Ervast began to fade. Ervast dropped back steadily and finished next to last.

Alexander Pantages was one of the last off at the post, but came on steadily, and loomed up dangerously at the turn for home. When Jockey Willie Jones gave him the word, Pantages overhauled the field in easy fashion and was going away at the finish. Knight's Call proved best of the others, but was closely pressed by Up. The others were never dangerous.

HEAVY FIGHT FEATURES WEEK

Schaaf, Braddock to Clash in New York Friday Night.

NEW YORK, Jan. 18 (A.P.).—Another heavyweight duel in Madison Square Garden and the appearance in Chicago of Jack (Kid) Berg, sensational English lightweight, top the national boxing schedule this week.

The Garden's regular Friday night show will find Ernie Schaf, of Boston, and James J. Braddock, of Jersey City, matched in the wind-up bout of ten rounds. Schaaf's last Garden appearance was impressive, for he outpointed the highly touted Pacific Coast slugger, Max Baer.

Play of Pair Hampered By Wind

Rivals Split $13,500 by Agreement at Agua Caliente.

Golden Scores 75 as Putting Decides; 1 Up at Turn.

By BRIAN BELL.

AGUA CALIENTE, Mexico, Jan. 18 (A.P.).—Steady John Golden, playing typical Golden golf, today won the Agua Caliente open championship, defeating George Von Elm, former amateur champion, by 4 strokes in an 18-hole play-off. Golden scored a consistent, but not sensational 75, 3 strokes over par, while the more spectacular Von Elm fell back to 79, with an erratic 41 on the second 9 holes.

After finishing the 72-hole championship proper in a deadlock at 293 yesterday, the stocky, dark-browned Golden and the fast-striding, blond, Von Elm, set out today in a 30-mile wind to decide who should have the honor of wearing the title of Agua Caliente champion for a year and own outright a diamond-studded medal, emblematic of the crown.

The long, hard golf course in the Tia Juana Valley, where the Spanish conquistadors, Coronado and Cabrillo, may have tramped on their travels in the olden days, is a severe test of the game when the wind is reasonable. When it blows, the long holes are longer and the shorter ones are trickier.

Wind Whips Flags As Pair Start.

As the professional and the "businessman golfer" teed up today at the first hole the wind was whipping the yellow and red flags on the greens into straight lines and it required no expert at the game to say no one would be home on the long holes in two strokes. Referee Walter Hagen had some trouble holding the flapping flags as the players putted.

Golden's approaching and putting won the title for him and one of the reasons his 2-year-old daughter, Rose Marie, who watched him hole out at the home hole, will have the beautiful medal pinned on her blouse, is that her father had no three-putt greens. Four times George had to have three putts. Putting won the tie for John over the championship route, for he had only nine three-putt greens in 90 holes.

The Connecticut pro was out in front with a birdie four at the first hole, his most sensational performance of the day. This gave him a two-stroke lead, for Von Elm started with a six. The 483-yard first hole today was a terror with the wind sweeping up the fairway dead in the faces of the players.

Golden Gains Another Stroke.

Neither could get close to home in two but Golden sent his third shot five feet from the cup, while Von Elm left himself a long putt from the back of the green and down the wind. John sent his putt spinning home while George ran well past and missed coming back, to be two strokes down after one hole.

The former amateur recovered a stroke at the third, a one-shotter where Golden was trapped from the tee and every hole was halved in fours until the eighth, another nightmare when the wind blew toward the tee. Each player hit three full woods on this 550-yard test and still Golden was not on, while George's spoon, his best shot of the day, reached the green, and in two putts he had his par, while John, for the first time in the round, had to slip a stroke over par.

The pro regained the stroke, however, at the ninth, a one-shot hole, where both were trapped, but Golden came from the sand close enough to hole his putt and start the second nine a stroke in the lead.

George started the second nine as he had the first by taking a six at the tenth, where his second was trapped and he sent his ball spinning over the green from the hazard. Golden was down with a regulation four. Von Elm lost another stroke at the 235-yard eleventh, where he missed the green fully 100 yards with his tee shot, while Golden was on the putting surface, George getting down in four to three for Golden.

Golden Increases His Advantage.

Golden's advantage was increased to five strokes when Von Elm took three putts at the twelfth, but George recovered one with a 6-foot putt for a birdie three at the fourteenth.

John reached the seventeenth without a serious error charged against his game and with a four-stroke lead and two holes to go, seemed to ease up. Von Elm could cut two strokes from the lead with a couple of pars, but George, too, was tired and the last two holes were played in six, five each, two over.

At the Agua Caliente race track this afternoon Wirt G. Bowman, president of the Agua Caliente Company, presented Golden a check for $10,000, with another check for $3,500 to Von Elm. Later John and George, as per agreement, will cash the checks and divide the accruing $13,500 into equal parts of $6,750.

Golden started his second tournament of the winter season here, making his debut in the Los Angeles open, where he failed to score a birdie in 36 holes and did not survive to the final 36. Von Elm has figured "in the money" to some extent in all the tournaments in which he has played since he entered the lists for golf gold last October, and should finish the season with earnings of more than $10,000, with a bit of luck in the remaining competitions.

The cards:

M'CARTHY NEEDS PITCHERS TO BOLSTER YANKEES

New Manager Depends on Weaver

Ex-Nat Sensation at Baltimore; Large Group of Rookies.

1930 Staff Was Near Bottom in Rankings for League.

By FRANK H. YOUNG.

JOE McCARTHY, new Yankee manager, finds himself in the same boat as Connie Mack, who pilots the world champions. He has good batters nad fielders, but frankly admits that if his team is to finish anywhere near the top in the 1931 flag chase it must get better pitching than it did last year.

A glance at the official averages with respect to last season's doings of the Yankee mound staff almost brings tears to "Marse Joe's" eyes, 'tis said. These figures show that the flingers under Bob Shawkey's wing had a miserable season. They rated either second or third from the bottom in practically every phase of the game.

Yankee Hurlers Battered.

Alien swatsmiths touched the slants of the Yankee hurlers for the third greatest number of hits, the third greatest number of runs and the third highest earned-run average per game, while they granted the second largest number of earned runs, uncorked the most wild pitches of any staff in the league and hit the second largest number of batters. In only two departments did they fare well, getting the third most strike-out victims and issuing the second smallest number of passes.

Naturally, in view of these records, McCarthy plans to specialize on the improvement of his pitching staff for the coming season, and among the raft of rookie twirlers signed he has picked out three to whom special attention will be paid at the St. Petersburg training camp, which opens next month.

One of this trio is no other than "Big Jim" Weaver, the "man mountain" who tried out with the Nationals at Tampa in the spring of 1929, while Walter Brown, heavyweight from the Oklahoma corn belt, and Frank Barnes, the left-hander who formerly was given a trial with the Detroit Tigers, complete the trio.

Weaver Showed Little With Nats.

If Weaver makes good, then Clark Griffith, Washington Club owner, will have to admit that he made a mistake. The big fellow, 6 feet 7 inches tall, apparently had nothing but height to recommend him when he was with the Nationals, and he was shunted to New Haven, where he had a great season in 1930. He was recalled and then tossed in with Infielder Stuffy Stewart and some cash in the deal with the Baltimore Orioles which gave the Nationals Outfielder George Loepp.

Weaver immediately became a star in the International and earned himself the reputation of being an "iron man." He took part in no less than 55 games, completing 14 and standing sixth in the league in percentage of victories, his record being 19 triumphs and 11 defeats. In earned run allowance, per game, he was third, his figures being 3.36. It is no wonder, from this record, that McCarthy hails the big boy as a great prospect.

Barnes and Brown Experienced.

Like Weaver, Barnes and Brown, the other ranking prospects, have had previous big league experience. Brown reported to the Yankees last August but a lame arm kept him from showing much. He had seen previous service with the Cleveland Indians, who bought him from New Orleans. He couldn't locate the plate any too well and so was released to the Western League. With Oklahoma City last season, he won sixteen games and lost only six. He allows few hits and his 210 pounds give him plenty of speed.

Barnes failed with the Tigers because he, too, could not find the plate. He was returned to Toronto where he apparently overcame his weakness, for he passed only 49 in 219 innings, while winning 13 games and losing 12. He participated in 38 games and went the route on 15 occasions.

McCarthy has a flock of would-be Yankee pitchers lined up, but believes that the three named above are the best of the lot with much of his team's 1931 fate depending upon the right arm of "Big Jim," the Nat cast-off.

—Miami Selections—

By J. B. SNODGRASS

THE Alhambra Claiming Handicap, 6 furlongs, for 3-year-olds and up, is the featured race at Hialeah, Miami, today, and is fifth on the program of seven races. MUD looks best of the field of five. ANGRY, which paid 80 to 1 as the winner of the Inaugural Handicap there last Thursday, may be the favorite in this race, but will find a vast difference in 107 pounds, carried then, and 120, allotted in this race. MUD, on the same date, ran third to Whisp and Prometheus, but that race was run in faster time than the one which was taken by ANGRY. While time is an unsafe guide to a winner, yet MUD is probably a faster horse on his entire record than the Whitney gelding, and on Maryland form should improve on his Miami race the other day. Furthermore, ANGRY is a bad post horse, and he got the breaks in his winning race. In his last Maryland race, which was at Pimlico, MUD was third to The Spars. HACKY H., winner of several races in Maryland, should hold the others safe. BLACK WATCH and GREENOCK being the other starters.

FIRST RACE—ZETA, daughter of Zev, which began her winter racing at St. Johns, won over Perkins and then was beaten by him, and either race appears to qualify her for the winning end of the purse which opens the program, at 6 furlongs. GERMAINE CHAUVELOT, winner of his first Miami start, in which he beat Batty Friday in 1:12 4-5, should be the contender, and may be quite dangerous. But ZETA'S time was better. CALGARY KAY appears best of the others, unless BARN DANCE should wake up.

SECOND RACE—For 2-year-olds at 2 furlongs. This is the shortest distance run on any track, and on a new straightaway built by the purchase of additional land, and which is wide enough to accommodate a larger field than the twelve listed to start in this race. In a race like this, it is a matter of getting away quickly, in which the jockey plays the principal part. Some of these juveniles started at St. Johns, among them STELLA F, which ran two fair races. She is selected to win on her race second to Siwanoy, in which she was beaten a neck. EVEN should get the place, having been second to GAN LEE, and the latter may be third. The race in which these two ran was not truly run, both beating Archese, the favorite. Most of the field will be making their first start and there is no line on them.

THIRD RACE—RUNNING GIRL is selected. She is dropped down in a cheaper field than in her last start, in the race won by Impish, with Blue Law and Austerlitz the contenders. She gave promise of speed in Maryland last fall. BOUNDER seems to have the edge on the others. VOLTABUSH may be in the money. There is no recent line on these.

FOURTH RACE—MUFF is due to turn the tables on LADY EBONY in the fourth event, for 3-year-olds at a mile and 70 yards. The daughter of Flying Ebony beat MUFF by a length Thursday, too much use having been made of MUFF in the early pace. It should be keenly contested, and LADY EBONY can go a route. DEE JOHN is best of the others, and ran well at St. Johns. JUNE MOON is on edge, and was beaten a short head Thursday by Directly.

SIXTH RACE—COOTS should win. He is due to improve over his last start, in which Whisp and Prometheus were the leaders all the way. Throw that race out, and COOTS is the form horse today. WACKET is the contender. He is another St. John's winner, but over a cheap field, even in comparison with this one. SCARLET BRIGADE is dangerous, and should take the show money.

SEVENTH RACE—MY SCOOP looks best. He was beaten the other day by Cabellsdale and Aurica. He is only an ordinary plater, but on Maryland form should beat the field today. BOUNDING DEEP will be the contender on his recent races. TOMMY ran well at New Orleans, and should at least be third.

"You Will Benefit Public Health"
Says
DR. J. F. X. STACK
Health Commissioner, City of Hoboken, N. J.

. . . one of 56 health officials from 56 different points approving Cremo's crusade against spit or spit-tipping.

DR. J. F. X. STACK
212 GARDEN STREET
HOBOKEN, N. J.

June 17, 1930.

American Cigar Company,
111 Fifth Avenue,
New York, N. Y.

Gentlemen:

I have seen your advertising displays in the newspapers and on billboards, telling people about the harm spitting may cause and the dangers lurking in cigars when the tips are sealed with spit. Your efforts to teach the public and thus prevent suffering will do more than sell cigars. You will benefit public health, and for that reason I want to give my enthusiastic approval to your campaign.

As a health commissioner, I am interested in seeing information of this sort brought home to everybody. Human ills would be greatly lessened if every person knew what danger there is in spitting in public places and in using the tongue to seal or moisten anything in manufacturing. Your campaign is indeed a "Crusade of Decency" and my department wishes you success in your efforts.

You are welcome to use this letter in your plan of public education, if you wish, with the understanding that I am not publicly endorsing your product in preference to any other, but that I am heartily in favor of your campaign to better your industry by making it cleaner.

Very truly yours,
J. F. X. Stack m. d.
Health Commissioner,
City of Hoboken, N. J.

Every smoker, every wife whose husband smokes cigars, should read Dr. Stack's letter.

"Who are the friends of 'Spit'?"

YOU MAY WELL ASK THIS QUESTION WHEN 56 IMPORTANT HEALTH OFFICIALS HAVE WRITTEN SO STRONGLY AGAINST THE EVILS OF SPIT OR SPIT-TIPPING.

Dr. Stack writes: "I am heartily in favor of your campaign to better your industry by making it cleaner."

The war against spit is a crusade of decency. Join it...Smoke Certified Cremo—a really wonderful smoke—mild—mellow—nut-sweet! Every leaf entering the clean, sunny Cremo factories is scientifically treated by methods recommended by the United States Department of Agriculture.

In this period of cold weather and cracked lips, above all insist on a cigar—free of the spit germ.

MARYLAND U. FIVE IS SEEN AS THREAT

Old Liners Rate High in Dixie Conference Title Race.

By DILLON GRAHAM.

ATLANTA, Ga., Jan. 18. (A.P.)—Sweeping aside three Southern Conference teams during the past week, Georgia's Bulldogs continued to set the pace in the basket ball race and led with six victories. The Athens Bulldogs whipped North Carolina State, 26 to 20, Tuesday and then in quick succession disposed of Tennessee, 22 to 19, and Georgia Tech, 39 to 30, on Friday and Saturday.

The fall of Duke, second ranking team in the South for two years, in its second game furnished one of the high lights of the week's play. Coach Jimmy Cameron's Blue Devils walloped South Carolina in the opener, 44 to 16, but Maryland's veteran aces proved too strong and the Devils lost, 32 to 24. Duke also lost to Temple, 44 to 27, but beat the Navy, 41 to 27, in its last road game.

Maryland's decisive victories over V. M. I. and Washington and Lee, in addition to the Duke conquest, rank the Old Liners as one of the real threats for the 1931 Dixie cage crown.

Virginia Polytechnic Institute downed the University of Virginia, 38 to 31, in the first conference contest for both teams.

heels with four double-deckers and one foul. Pultz, Yankee center and former University of Vermont star, sank five field-goals, while Johnny Dunn, besides playing a bang-up floor game, found time to collect a pair of two-pointers and one foul.

The sharpshooting of Harris and Banta was largely responsible for the 32-to-23 victory. Stewart Brother Photographers scored over Takoma in a preliminary contest. The win enabled the Stewarts to clinch the first series in the Montgomery County League.

WEISSMULLER, HERE, TALKS AND SWIMS

That was in the fall of 1928, after his return from Olympic triumphs. Now at 26, he is retired—for a number of reasons. In the first place, he realized of a sudden that, while he was having a great time living on the clubs and organizations who begged for his services as an exhibitionist, he nevertheless saw that fun was the only material return he was getting for a vocation which took two hours of practice a day, and all the rest in traveling and going through the motions for the edification of the populace.

Then another reason for retiring was that he had in his trophy case all the official records from 50 yards to a half mile—in all available tank lengths. This was an attainment which came at the end of a campaign spread over four years, during which time he rarely entered a race unless it was with the express purpose of breaking the record.

For two years, he has been with a famous corporation manufacturing a style of underwear whom fastidious men like best next to themselves. Johnny is assistant manager of the swim suit department, and he is on the go continually, even more than when he was an amateur, now that he is traveling in the interest of his firm.

Johnny's more than wrapped up in his work. His biggest task, for which he draws a rather prohibitive salary, is designing bathing suits. He says that 75 per cent of the swimmers in the world don't know why they aren't better. The suit, if we are to believe Weissmuller and his swimming-champion boss, B. Allan Magee, is the crux of the situation.

Too Busy to Think of Amateur Days.

He likes his new field of endeavor, enormously, and is too busy to think much about the old irresponsible days of amateurism. He has grown a little heavier—weighs 195 now—but never misses his daily swim. He still goes through the old training decreed by Norman Backrach, coach at the Illinois Athletic Club (who himself can not swim): an hour of leg swimming and an hour of arm swimming each day.

In the days when he was starting, you couldn't keep him away from the pools around Chicago. He made himself pretty much of a pest around the I. A. C. and when the members would shoo him off to high school, where he was supposed to be, Johnny would go over to the Y. M. C. A. instead. Harry Cochran, now instructor at the Shoreham, saw him when he was 16 years old and was struck by the enormous size of his hands and feet. He predicted great things of him, things that came true when he finally caught Backrach's eye by diving in the pool beside the star of the club, who was practicing for a meet, and beating him by yards to the tape.

Arne Borg, Scandinavia's great gift to swimming, gave him the hardest race he ever had. It was in the 1924 Olympics, the 100 meters. Johnny collapsed after beating him. He never enjoyed the Olympics, Johnny says. He had to train too much.

Al Schwartz, the I. A. C.'s new sensation, is about the only youngster who might beat his records, is Weissmuller's contention.

Future Calls for More Traveling.

Johnny's future plans call for more traveling with his new line of bathing suits, with an exhibition, such as he gave yesterday afternoon at the Shoreham, thrown in to relieve the monotony.

Johnny, brands as a deliberate canard the reports that he broke the 220 free style for the first time immediately after he had eaten eight hot dogs.

"No such thing," he stoutly denies. "It was only 7."

SAYS PEGLER

a letter to his friend, Joe, saying: 'The poor fellow owed me $700, but if nothing was left, he is still my pal, but if he left anything I would like to have my money.'"

Once a pal, always a pal, in the manly art of self-defense.

But my serial letters from the Madison Square Garden Corporation are my best. They come numbered, a week's series for each prize fight in the Garden, and I am saving them for a book.

The series on the prize fight between Max Baer and Old Thomas Heeney, the crushed rock from Down Under, will be the chapter that will send the editions of the book up into K, L and M.

Release No. 1, for use Monday morning, said:

"Where managers, trainers and good friends have failed to correct Max Baer's headstrong training habits, love has succeeded. The smashing puncher, who made a distinct hit with the Garden fans last month when he fought the best bout the heavyweight division has witnessed in many months, will square off against Tom Heeney in the Garden next Friday night.

"The Californian is deeply smitten by a society woman of the Plus Ultra, an exclusive divorcee, and Baer has been emulating Gene Tunney to acquire the finesse, polish, education, etiquette and politeness necessary to gain entry to the Social Register and win the hand of the snooty society dame.

"Fired by love, the young Lochinvar of Lafrup craves the title and vows to drive Max Schmeling through a stone wall at twelve paces to win his society sweetheart. His ambition is to earn $500,000 within the next year, a monetary trifle sufficient to support the belle of the haute monde."

Ah, love.

I wonder what they write about to George Bernard Shaw, but I wouldn't trade a dry quart of my mail for a long bale of his.

SOUTH TO OBSERVE LEE'S BIRTH TODAY; CELEBRATION HERE

Stonewall Jackson Is Linked With Ceremonies to Be Held at Capital.

RANKIN ON PROGRAM IN CONFEDERATE HALL

Banks and Schools to Close at Various Places in Nearby Virginia.

Those born below the Mason-Dixon line will join today in celebrating the birthdays of two of the South's greatest leaders, Robert E. Lee and Stonewall Jackson. This is the anniversary of Lee's birth. Jackson's comes later in the week, but societies celebrating the events have combined them into one observance.

In this city organized observance of the anniversaries will be conducted under the auspices of Camp 171, United Confederate Veterans, assisted by the Sons and Daughters of the Confederacy in the District of Columbia.

The celebration will take place in Confederate Memorial Hall, 1322 Vermont avenue northwest. On the program will be Southern melodies and an address by Representative John E. Rankin, Mississippi.

Lee's Address to Be Read.

Lee's farewell address to his soldiers at Appomattox Courthouse will be read by Mrs. Maude Howell Smith, and a selection, "The Sword of Robert E. Lee," will be given by Mrs. Benjamin S. Ganz. Representative Rankin will be introduced by Gen. W. L. Wilkerson.

In many sections in nearby Virginia banks and schools will be closed. One of the most noteworthy celebrations will take place in Alexandria, the annual dinner of Lee Camp, United Confederate Veterans. Representatives John J. McSwain, of South Carolina, and Lafayette L. Patterson, of Alabama, will be the principal speakers. The dinner will be served by the Mary Custis Lee Seventeenth Virginia Chapter, United Daughters of the Confederacy.

In Arlington County.

Arlington County, where Lee made his home for many years, will observe his birthday at the home of Mrs. Eleanor F. Hatcher, 140 Marion avenue, Clarendon. The observance will be under auspices of Arlington Chapter, No. 149, United Daughters of the Confederacy. Other organizations have been invited to participate.

In Fairfax County schools will not be closed, but the Fairfax Chapter, United Daughters of the Confederacy, will meet in observance of the anniversary in the home of Mrs. L. B. Eaton, at Fairfax. The R. E. Lee Chapter will meet at the home of its president, Mrs. Harry A. Fellows, in East Falls Church.

Another program in memory of the generals of the Confederate army will be held Friday by the Society of Virginia at the Willard. There will be a ball and an entertainment at the hall, the Confederate Veterans and the Sons of Confederate Veterans, sponsors of the organization, will be in the grand march. A Lee-Jackson tableau, with members of the society taking the leading parts, will follow the march.

Three Capital Youths Quit Home for Thrills

Elder of Trio Long Has Cherished Ambition to Go West and Become Trapper; Family Pantry Found Depleted.

Three Washington boys yielded to the temptation to hunt for new thrills in the Wild West yesterday, and last night a mother kept the lights of her home burning throughout the rainy night, hoping her son would return home.

The missing boys are Grant Marshall, 17, son of Mr. and Mrs. R. S. Marshall, 2009 Franklin street northeast, and Eugene McGolrick, 15, 2012 Franklin street northeast. The third is said to be James Plainer, Twenty-fourth street near Franklin street northeast. Plainer is the youngest of the trio.

Grant's execution of his long threatened plan to "go out West and be a trapper," was discovered by his elder sister, Miss Mildred Marshall, 20, when she went to prepare supper for the family.

She looked for flour, but that was missing. Then she began a hunt for other things in the pantry, but discovered that they were missing, also.

Just then her mother returned from a visit to North Beach, Md., and Miss Marshall explained to her mother that the pantry had been depleted and also that sh had not seen her brother that afternoon.

Then Mrs. Marshall began a search of the neighborhood for her son. Several of his playmates told her that they had seen him in company with young McGolrick and Plainer.

She went to the McGolrick residence and found that Eugene also had not been seen by his parents during the afternoon. But where Grant had taken along foodstuffs only, in preparation for his trip, Eugene had packed away several shirts and some other clothing in a small suit case.

Eugene's and Grant's playmates told Mrs. Marshall that they had seen the boys yesterday afternoon and that Marshall had his father's double-barreled shotgun. The plans of the three were to go to Alexandria and catch a train for the West. Before they left, however, they said they were going to do some hunting in Virginia.

Mr. and Mrs. McGolrick are confident their son will return. Mrs. Marshall, however, said she would keep the lights burning in her home all night, hoping to guide her son home.

Grant Marshall was one of the boys who recently built a log cabin in the woods south of Rhode Island avenue, near Fifteenth street northeast, for use of unemployed men. He and his playmates provided some of the jobless with food.

OFFICE TO OCCUPY SPACE OVER LOBBY OF COURT BUILDING

Original Plans for Square May Be Carried Out Soon as Result.

ROOM MUST BE HAD FOR ANOTHER OFFICER

Marshal Snyder Is Anxious Congress Press Project on First Lines.

Possibility that original plans for the Courthouse Square may be carried out within the near future was seen yesterday, as the result of a conference on Saturday on present crowded conditions and the necessity of making room for an additional unit.

A group of men paced the corridors of the court building. They sought a space into which to put a new official. They found one. It was just over the central lobby of the courthouse, described as one of the building's most beautiful interior spots. But the men who were pacing decided that for the time being that place must go. So, since they represented the office of the Capitol architect, it is reasonable to assume that the remodeling will begin as soon in the spring as it is feasible and not so as to disturb court sessions. Night work is not being considered.

Change of Entrances.

"We are sorry," said an attache of the Capitol Architect's Office, "but we need the space. The only place we can find is where we have found it. We hope to give the bar association access to its auxiliary library by a companionway, but the United States attorney's clerk's office must be closed except from the Fifth street side."

But there are advocates of other plans.

The courthouse at present is too crowded—there should be more room.

This is voiced not only by subordinates, but by United States Marshal Edgar C. Snyder. In addition to his duties in seeing that criminals remain in jail, Mr. Snyder must see that every one in the courthouse is comfortable, and that most of them are paid. Mr. Snyder is not only the custodian, but also the paymaster.

New Position Provided.

The new emergency comes as a result of the designation by justices and the Bar Association of the position of "assignment clerk," which automatically carries with it control of juries available at all times for civil cases.

While there has been no intimation as to the time the new court system is to go into effect it was understood that the regulation would become effective in October, and that prior to that time the Bar Association would be busy drafting new rules.

"Such a room must be large," said the marshal, "or else it could not accomplish its purpose. We have done what we can temporarily.

"But why can't Congress do its part and appropriate sufficient money to carry out the original building program? If that were done, everything would be O. K., and the fathers of the Municipal Center would not have to worry about us. Of course, there could be a wing built back of us, but why?"

Another Building Planned.

The original plans when the courthouse was remodeled during the World War called for balancing annexes. The Court of Appeals on the Fifth street side was to be balanced by a building to house the register of wills and the recorder of deeds on the Fourth street side.

"We need just that at present," said the marshal. "We have taken care of two additional judges and one more court, but we have had to sacrifice our dormitory for jurors. Now we are confronted with a new problem. We had a beautiful building inside and outside, but while the exterior may look good—in future, try to find a more crowded place if you can?"

The courthouse interior was remodeled last summer to make room for the two judges approved by Congress and an additional courtroom, not included in the original plans.

MOTORIST ACCUSED BY INJURED WOMAN

Assault Charge Filed by Victim of Fall From Catlin's Auto.

MAN MAINTAINS SILENCE

Elmer Catlin, 25 years old, of G street northwest, near Twentieth street, who was at the Tenth Precinct police station following the injury of a woman who was thrown or jumped from his automobile on Lanier place near Seventeenth street northwest early yesterday morning, was last night charged with assault and released on $200 collateral.

The woman, Nellie Virginia Wine, was named as complainant on the assault charge. She lives at the same address as Catlin. Catlin made no statement concerning the affair, police said.

O. J. Stockman, of Adams Mill road, near Calvert street northwest, was parking his car on Lanier street when he saw a woman's body pitch out of a passing car. After ministering to the woman he ran to get the number of the auto. He said a man stepped from it and mingled in the crowd which had gathered around the woman lying in the street. Another man, H. P. Wood, living near the scene, held the man until police came. He was taken to the station, where he gave the name of Catlin.

Miss Wine was taken to Emergency Hospital, where she was treated for lacerations, bruises, and possible internal injuries. After receiving first aid she left the hospital.

WALKS FROM HOSPITAL

Edward B. Dean, a lawyer, fell out of bed in the Portland Hotel early yesterday and landed on a shed four stories below. A half hour later he walked from Emergency Hospital, refusing further medical attention after he had been treated for a laceration of the head and two broken ribs.

Police said that Dean's bed was near a window and he apparently had been rolling on the bed and rolled out the window. On the way down he struck a fire escape, which threw him onto the roof of a wooden shed in back of the hotel.

J. P. Hand, a clerk in the hotel, and H. Foote, a roomer, heard the sound of Dean's contact with the shed and found him in a semiconscious condition. Dean, who is 29 years old, was removed to Emergency Hospital.

Although doctors there believed that he was suffering from internal injuries, he refused to remain overnight.

WESSON RECOVERING FROM SHOT WOUND

Man Who Staged Wild Taxi Ride Still Too Weak for Questioning.

TARGET OF POLICE GUN

Macon Wesson, 23-year-old son of Lieut. Col. C. M. Wesson, U. S. A., who was shot by a policeman Friday night after his wild ride in a taxicab, was reported to be in a slightly improved condition at Garfield Hospital yesterday.

The shot, fired by Policeman M. J. Mahaney, of the Eight Precinct, climaxed a pursuit which was brought to a close when the taxicab driver, in whose cab Wesson was passenger, crashed intentionally into a tree at Connecticut avenue and Kalorama road northwest.

Wesson, who had fired shots through the windshield of the cab and further intimidated the driver, J. R. Jenson, with a revolver, was critically wounded under the heart by the policeman's bullet.

Because of the seriousness of his condition, police have been unable to question Wesson regarding his strang ride and his predilection for shooting.

Wesson is an employe of the Washington Airport. According to police he is married but separated from his wife.

THE ONCE OVER

DOWN WITH DRUNKEN BICYCLISTS!

"Elizabeth, N. J.—Patrolman James Rodgers today seized Henry Peluxam, 28 years old, charged with riding a bicycle while intoxicated. Judge James J. Brown denounced him as almost as bad as a drunken automobile driver and suspended sentence."—News item.

READERS will agree that it is high time our cities dealt firmly with this growing menace to life and limb—the drunken bicyclist.

• • • •

Next to the college student who runs amuck by horse and buggy, the intoxicated cyclist is the greatest threat to public safety. Hardly a day passes that our newspapers do not display the headlines, "Hit and Run Bicyclist Injures 4," "Police Scour City for Cyclist Who Killed 2" or "Intoxicated Wheelman Blamed for Crime Wave."

• • • •

The streets of our cities are no longer safe.

• • • •

Liquor and the bicycle represent a combination highly hazardous to all other users of the highways and byways. Something should be done to make the American wheelman realize that a bicycle is a dangerous instrument in the hands of the operator whose senses are in any way impaired.

• • • •

The man who hogs the road on a bicycle or who heedlessly pedals across intersections is bad enough, but the man who cycles through our communities drunk is a monster!

• • • •

NOBODY is safe any more. The wealthy sportsman who totters from his exclusive club, leaps on his bicycle and tears through congested streets with the odor of liquor on his breath should not be tolerated. He deserves less consideration than the workingman who, riding his wheel home from the shop, stops for a few glasses of beer, and then navigates his uncertain course without a sense of direction or responsibility.

• • • •

"Down with the reckless bicyclist!"

• • • •

That should be America's slogan in these trying times.

While we are on the subject, it might be well to urge our prosecutors and judges to deal severely also with citizens who do not sound their bicycle bells at crossings. Complaints of wheelmen darting hither and thither without bells have been increasing, and even those who have bells do not use them.

• • • •

The question the country must face is just this: Is a man a privileged member of the community because he owns a bicycle?

• • • •

No, ten thousand times no! Now is the time to show the wheelman that he has gone too far. Now is the time to call a halt on irresponsible bicycling both for business and for pleasure.

• • • •

SONG OF THE BETHLEHEM STEEL CORPORATION DIRECTORS.

Oh, is there an onus
Attached to a bonus?
Pray tell me, alas and alack!
For if there's an onus
Attached to a bonus
I might want to give it all back.

THE United States Government will no longer allow dry agents to purchase liquor at Government expense. The idea is that the raided speakeasy gets so much advertising out of it that the owner should be willing to pay for the drinks.

Wonder if they stopped that Clara Bow trial now and then to show animated cartoons and a news reel? And if the daily hearings were preceded by a symphonic concert?

BLAME FOR OFFICIAL DOUBTED IN INJURIES

Mount Rainier Councilman Still Faces Charge; Man Hurt Was Veteran.

DISPUTE OVER SIDEWALK

Although Mount Rainier authorities last night expressed the opinion that the injuries received by Charles E. Smith were not due to his fight with Floyd B. Mathias, town councilman, Lieut. Tom Garrison said that the warrant against Mathias would not be withdrawn. Smith, who lives in the town, was admitted to Walter Reed Hospital several days after his fight with Mathias in the town hall.

B. E. Sager, clerk of the town, said last night that town officers had been told by Capt. John Hargreaves, of the hospital, that Smith's condition, said to be serious, could not be due to the blows by Mathias.

Hargreaves, however, said he told Sager that what injuries Smith had, or where he received them, is still unknown to hospital authorities.

The fisticuffs took place in the town hall shortly before a special meeting of the council last Thursday. Smith, a wounded war veteran, who is receiving compensation from the Government, is said to have blamed Mathias for the muddy condition of the sidewalks in front of Smith's home. He is said to have struck Mathias and knocked him through the door of the town hall before Mathias retaliated with a blow to the jaw.

When Smith appeared to be worse Saturday, the executive officer of the hospital sent a telegram to Mount Rainier, and a warrant charging assault and battery was sworn out against Mathias. At a hearing before a justice of the peace he is said to have admitted striking Smith.

"America" Traced To Name of Tribe

History Student Contends "Amerrique" Was Ahead of Vespucci.

Debunking the notion that this country was named after the Italian, Amerigo Vespucci, Dr. Edward H. Young, student of history, told the Washington Secular League yesterday afternoon research had convinced him that the name America was taken from a tribe of Indians.

These Indians, Dr. Young said, were found by explorers in the region of Central America and were known as "Amerriques." Descendants of this race live today in a territory called "Sierra Amerrique," Dr. Young said. The name "America" was in general circulation in Europe before Vespucci set up his claim in 1515 to the honor of having the new lands named after him, the lecturer contended.

Dr. A. B. Baden was elected president of the league to fill the vacancy caused by the resignation of Frederick Haller.

ILLNESS PREVENTS SCHEDULED SERMON

Rev. Gabriel Francis Fills Vacancy in Catholic Radio Hour.

TO HOLD NOON SERVICES

The sudden illness of the Rev. Paul James Francis, founder and father general of the Franciscan Friars of the Atonement of Graymoor, New York, prevented his preaching the opening sermon on the observance of the Church Unity Octave as originally scheduled. The Rev. Gabriel Francis, assistant to the father general and rector of the Graymoor College of St. John, delivered the sermon on the Washington Catholic radio hour yesterday afternoon.

The doctor will permit Father Paul to preach later in the week, but meanwhile Father Gabriel will follow the subjects as outlined in the program.

In yesterday's sermon Father Gabriel showed that the foundation of the Creation is love. And love requires unity. God placed Adam and Eve in the Garden of Paradise, and gave them as a test of their love for Him the command that they should not eat of the forbidden fruit. They loved themselves more than they loved Him, and so by their disobedience showed their lack of love for Him, and brought disunion into the world. God then created a New Eden, the Catholic Church, wherein He placed not a tree, but a chair, the chair of unity, the chair of Peter. For fifteen centuries His followers obeyed this chair of unity. Then certain individuals, following their own self-love, and forgetting God, broke away from the Catholic Church and the chair of unity, and walked in paths of their own making, not God's. The call goes out today for a return to that unity by a return to that obedience in which the Christian world walked for so many centuries.

Father Gabriel will preach today at 12:15 noon on "The Orient and the Holy See." This noonday service will take place every day this week at noon in observance of the church unity octave.

Auditor, Near Asphyxiation, Rescued by Elevator Man

The alertness of an elevator operator at the Conard Apartments, 1228 I street northwest, may result in saving the life of Joseph E. Handel, 45 years of age, auditor in the general accounting office, who was rescued from a gas-filled apartment in the building.

The elevator man, Walter Coleman, colored, 51 years of age, of 1731 S street northwest, said he smelled gas when the lift approached the fourth floor of the building last night. He started an instant search and located the strongest odor at the door of Handel's quarters, he said. Coleman forced his way into the apartment and discovered Handel, with his head bowed over a kitchen table, unconscious. All of the gas jets were open, according to Coleman.

The fire rescue squad was called and Handel was partially revived. He was then removed to Emergency Hospital, where physicians said last night his condition was serious. Police said that they had disbovered a card upon which were listed four names. They notified Mrs. Catherine Green, a sister, of Brentwood, Md., one of the persons named on the card.

Police Lose Smoke Screen Car After Exciting Chase

An attempt to overhaul two speeders on the Pennsylvania avenue southeast bridge last night led to two exciting chases by police when the speeders declined to be overhauled.

Lieut. M. D. Smith and Sergt. W. J. Cunningham, of the Traffic Bureau, were coming over the bridge when the speeders passed them, going about 30 miles an hour. As Lieut. Smith speeded up to catch the car ahead, he noticed that the car kept increasing its lead, until the speedometer reached some 40 miles an hour.

At that time, the two men occupying the leading machine placed in action a smoke screen that all but blinded the two officers. In the obscurity of the smoke, the car escaped. It was picked up in the Southeast an hour later by Motorcycle Policeman W. M. Saunders, who chased it up an alley and got a smoking that caused him to stop.

Saunders reported to the Traffic Bureau that he got close enough to identify both men. They apparently had a small load of liquor on the car, or, police intimate, may have been trying out the smoke apparatus to see how it worked.
